

ROLFE, WILLIAM J.

SHAKESPEARE'S COMEDY OF THE TEMPEST

STEVE HIGHFILL

THE KESSELSTADT DEATH-MASK (FROM A PHOTOGRAPH).

SHAKESPEARE'S COMEDY OF
THE TEMPEST.

EDITED, WITH NOTES,

BY

WILLIAM J. ROLFE, A.M.,

FORMERLY HEAD MASTER OF THE HIGH SCHOOL, CAMBRIDGE, MASS.

WITH ENGRAVINGS.

NEW YORK:
HARPER & BROTHERS, PUBLISHERS,
FRANKLIN SQUARE.

1886.

ENGLISH CLASSICS.

EDITED BY WM. J. ROLFE, A.M.

Illustrated. 16mo, Cloth, 56 cents per volume; Paper, 40 cents per volume.

SHAKESPEARE'S WORKS.

The Merchant of Venice.
Othello.
Julius Cæsar.
A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Macbeth.
Hamlet.
Much Ado about Nothing.
Romeo and Juliet.
As You Like It.
The Tempest.
Twelfth Night.
The Winter's Tale.
King John.
Richard II.
Henry IV. Part I.
Henry IV. Part II.
Henry V.
Richard III.
Henry VIII.
King Lear.

The Taming of the Shrew.
All's Well that Ends Well.
Coriolanus.
The Comedy of Errors.
Cymbeline.
Antony and Cleopatra.
Measure for Measure.
Merry Wives of Windsor.
Love's Labour's Lost.
Two Gentlemen of Verona.
Timon of Athens.
Troilus and Cressida.
Henry VI. Part I.
Henry VI. Part II.
Henry VI. Part III.
Pericles, Prince of Tyre.
The Two Noble Kinsmen.
Venus and Adonis, Lucrece, etc.
Sonnets.
Titus Andronicus.

GOLDSMITH'S SELECT POEMS.

GRAY'S SELECT POEMS.

PUBLISHED BY HARPER & BROTHERS, NEW YORK.

 Any of the above works will be sent by mail, postage prepaid, to any part of the United States, on receipt of the price.

Copyright, 1871, by HARPER & BROTHERS.

Copyright, 1884, by HARPER & BROTHERS.

CONTENTS.

| | Page |
|---|------|
| INTRODUCTION TO THE TEMPEST..... | 7 |
| I. THE HISTORY OF THE PLAY..... | 7 |
| II. THE SOURCES OF THE PLOT..... | 9 |
| III. CRITICAL COMMENTS ON THE PLAY..... | 10 |
| THE TEMPEST..... | 31 |
| ACT I..... | 33 |
| " II..... | 54 |
| " III..... | 71 |
| " IV..... | 84 |
| " V..... | 94 |
| NOTES..... | 107 |

Thy groans
Did make wolves howl (i. 2. 288).

"BERMOOTHES."

INTRODUCTION

TO

THE TEMPEST.

I. HISTORY OF THE PLAY.

The Tempest occupies the first nineteen pages of the Folio of 1623, and no earlier edition of the play has been discovered. It is not unlikely, as White has suggested, that "it was made the leading play, as being one of the latest and most admired works of its author." Mr. Joseph Hunter* has attempted to show that it was written as early as 1596; but the commentators generally agree that the date cannot be put earlier than 1603, and that it was probably as late as 1611.

* New Illustrations of Shakespeare (1845), vol. i. pp. 122-157.

The speech of Gonzalo (ii. 1), "I' the commonwealth I would by contraries," etc., is manifestly copied (see p. 124 below) from a passage in Florio's translation of Montaigne, which appeared in 1603. We must therefore believe that the play was written after that time, unless we adopt the hypothesis that Shakespeare had seen Florio's work in manuscript. The Accounts of the Revels at Court state that The Tempest was performed before King James, Nov. 1st, 1611; but the entry, which is as follows, is now known to be a forgery:

| | |
|--------------------------|---|
| By the Kings players, | Hallomas nyght was presented att Whithall before y ^e Kinges Ma ^{tie} a play called the Tempest. |
|--------------------------|---|

"To this positive external testimony,"* says White, "are to be added some external probabilities. First, in the occurrence of a passage in the Introduction to Ben Jonson's Bartholomew Fair, written between 1612 and 1614, which has a hit, not necessarily ill-humored, at those who have 'a Servant-monster' in their dramatis personæ, and 'beget Tales, Tempests, and such like Drolleries,' where the allusion to The Tempest is too plain to be mistaken—an allusion which would be made only when the impression of that play was fresh in the public mind. Next, in the publication by Sil[vester] Jourdan of a quarto pamphlet entitled 'A Discovery of the Barmvdas, otherwise called the Ile of Divels: by Sir Thomas Gates, Sir George Sommers, and Captayne Newport, with diuers others. London, 1610.' This pamphlet tells of the tempest which scattered the fleet commanded by Somers and Gates, and the happy discovery, by some of the shipwrecked, of land which proved to be the Bermudas. It alludes to the general belief that these islands 'were never inhabited by any Christian or Heathen people,' being 'reputed a most prodigious and enchanted place,' adding that, nevertheless, those who were cast away upon them, and lived there nine months, found the air temperate and the country 'abundantly fruitful of all fit necessaries for the sustentation and preservation of man's life.' Prospero's command to Ariel 'to fetch dew from the still-vex'd Bermoothes' makes it certain that the Bermudas are not the scene of The Tempest, though, strangely enough, it has produced the contrary impression on many minds ; but this reference to these islands, and allusion to their storm-vexed coast, connects itself naturally with the publication of Jourdan's narrative. It is highly probable, therefore, that The Tempest was written about 1611.

* This was written before the forgery was detected.

"The thoughtful reader will, however, find in the compact simplicity of its structure, and in the chastened grandeur of its diction and the lofty severity of its tone of thought, tempered although the one is with Shakespeare's own enchanting sweetness, and the other with that most human tenderness which is the peculiar trait of his mind, sufficient evidence that this play is the fruit of his genius in its full maturity."

II. THE SOURCES OF THE PLOT.

Shakespeare usually founded his plays upon some well-known history or romance, and the plot of The Tempest, though the critics have not succeeded in tracing it to its source, was probably borrowed from some old Italian or Spanish novel. Collins, the poet, told Thomas Warton that he had seen such a novel, with the title of Aurelio and Isabella, and that it was "printed in Italian, Spanish, French, and English, in 1588 ;" and Boswell says that a friend of his assured him that, some years before, he had "actually perused an Italian novel which answered to Collins's description." But Collins was insane when he made the statement, and Boswell's friend may have been mistaken ; at any rate, the romance has not yet been found. There is an early German play (published in 1618) called Die Schöne Sidea, by Jacob Ayrrer, a notary of Nuremberg, the plot of which is somewhat like that of The Tempest, and this has led several critics to suppose that the two were drawn from the same source ; but the resemblance is hardly close enough to justify the conclusion. If there is any connection between the plays, it is possible that Ayrrer had seen The Tempest, or a translation of it. Although, according to Eschenburg, no reference to Shakespeare has been found in German literature farther back than 1682, it is certain that English plays were translated into German as early as 1600.

"As to the actual scene of The Tempest, that is in the realms of fancy. Mr. Hunter has contended that Lampedusa, 'an island in the Mediterranean, lying not far out of a ship's course passing from Tunis to Naples,' and which is uninhabited, and supposed by sailors to be enchanted, was Prospero's place of exile. It may have been; though if it were, we would a little rather not believe so. When the great magician at whose beck it rose from the waters broke his staff, the island sunk, and carried Caliban down with it" (W.).

III. CRITICAL COMMENTS ON THE PLAY.

[From Coleridge's Notes on Shakespeare.*]

The Tempest is a specimen of the purely romantic drama, in which the interest is not historical, or dependent upon fidelity of portraiture, or the natural connection of events; but is a birth of the imagination, and rests only on the coaptation and union of the elements granted to, or assumed by, the poet. It is a species of drama which owes no allegiance to time or space, and in which, therefore, errors of chronology and geography—no mortal sins in any species—are venial faults, and count for nothing. It addresses itself entirely to the imaginative faculty; and although the illusion may be assisted by the effect on the senses of the complicated scenery and decorations of modern times, yet this sort of assistance is dangerous. For the principal and only genuine excitement ought to come from within—from the moved and sympathetic imagination; whereas, where so much is addressed to the mere external senses of seeing and hearing, the spiritual vision is apt to languish, and the attraction from without will withdraw the mind from the proper and only legitimate interest which is intended to spring from within.

* Coleridge's Works (Harper's ed.), vol. iv. p. 74 foll.

The romance opens with a busy scene admirably appropriate to the kind of drama, and giving, as it were, the key-note to the whole harmony. It prepares and initiates the excitement required for the entire piece, and yet does not demand any thing from the spectators which their previous habits had not fitted them to understand. It is the bustle of a tempest, from which the real horrors are abstracted ; therefore it is poetical, though not in strictness natural, and is purposely restrained from concentrating the interest on itself, but used merely as an induction or tuning for what is to follow.

In the second scene, Prospero's speeches, till the entrance of Ariel, contain the finest example I remember of retrospective narration for the purpose of exciting immediate interest, and putting the audience in possession of all the information necessary for the understanding of the plot. Observe, too, the perfect probability of the moment chosen by Prospero (the very Shakespeare himself, as it were, of the tempest) to open out the truth to his daughter, his own romantic bearing, and how completely any thing that might have been disagreeable to us in the magician is reconcilable and shaded in the humanity and natural feelings of the father. In the very first speech of Miranda the simplicity and tenderness of her character are at once laid open—it would have been lost in direct contact with the agitation of the first scene. . . .

Ariel has in everything the airy tint which gives the name. And it is worthy of remark that Miranda is never directly brought into comparison with Ariel, lest the natural and human of the one and the supernatural of the other should tend to neutralize each other. Caliban, on the other hand, is all earth, all condensed and gross in feelings and images ; he has the dawns of understanding, without reason or the moral sense ; and in him, as in some brute animals, this advance to the intellectual faculties, without the moral sense, is marked by the appearance of vice. For it is in the primacy of the moral being only that man is truly human ; in his intellectual powers he is certainly approached by the brutes, and, man's whole system duly considered, those powers cannot be considered other than means to an end, that is, to morality. . . .

In this play are admirably sketched the vices generally accompanying a low degree of civilization ; and in the first scene of the second act Shakespeare has, as in many other places, shown the tendency in bad men to indulge in scorn and contemptuous expressions, as a mode of getting rid of their own uneasy feelings of inferiority to the good, and also, by making the good ridiculous, of rendering the transition of others to wickedness easy. Shakespeare never puts habitual scorn into the mouths of other than bad men, as here in the instance of Antonio and Sebastian. The scene of the intended assassination of Alonso and Gonzalo is an exact counterpart of the scene between Macbeth and his lady, only pitched in a lower key throughout, as designed to be frustrated or concealed, and exhibiting the same profound management in the manner of familiarizing a mind not immediately recipient to the suggestion of guilt, by associating the proposed crime with something ludicrous or out of place—something not habitually matter of reverence. By this kind of sophistry the imagination and fancy are first bribed to contemplate the suggested act, and at length to become acquainted with it. Observe how the effect of this scene is heightened by contrast of another counterpart of it in low life—that between the conspirators, Stephano, Caliban, and Trinculo, in the second scene of the third act, in which there are the same essential characteristics.

In this play, and in this scene of it, are also shown the springs of the vulgar in politics—of that kind of politics which is inwoven with human nature. In his treatment of this subject, wherever it occurs, Shakespeare is quite peculiar. In other writers we find the particular opinions of the individual ; . . . but Shakespeare never promulgates any party tenets. He is always the philosopher and the moralist, but, at the same time, with a profound veneration for all the established institutions of society, and for those classes which form the permanent elements of the state—especially never introducing a professional character, as such, otherwise than as respectable. If he must have any name, he should be styled a philosophical aristocrat, delighting in those hereditary institutions which have a tendency to bind one age to another, and in that distinction of ranks of which, although few may be in possession, all enjoy the advantages. Hence, again, you will observe the good nature with which he seems always to make sport with the passions and follies of a mob, as with an irrational animal. He is never angry with it, but hugely content with holding up its absurdities to its face ; and sometimes you may trace a tone of almost affectionate superiority, something like that in which a father speaks of the rogueries of a child. See the good-humoured way in which he describes Stephano, passing from the most licentious freedom to absolute despotism over Trinculo and Caliban. The truth is, Shakespeare's characters are all genera intensely individualized ; the results of meditation, of which observation supplied the drapery and the colours necessary to combine them with each other. He had virtually surveyed all the great component powers and impulses of human nature—had seen that their different combinations and subordinations were in fact the individualizers of men, and showed how their harmony was produced by reciprocal disproportions of excess or deficiency. The language in which these truths are expressed was not drawn from any set fashion, but from the profoundest depths of his moral being. and is therefore for all ages.

[From Schlegel's "Lectures on Dramatic Literature."*]

The Midsummer-Night's Dream and The Tempest may be so far compared together that in both the influence of a wonderful world of spirits is interwoven with the turmoil of human passions and with the farcical adventures of folly. The Midsummer-Night's Dream is certainly an earlier production ; but The Tempest, according to all appearance, was written in Shakespeare's later days : hence most critics, on the supposition that the poet must have continued to improve with increasing maturity of mind, have honoured the last piece with a marked preference. I cannot, however, altogether concur with them : the intrinsic merits of these two works are, in my opinion, pretty nearly balanced, and a predilection for the one or the other can only be governed by personal taste. In profound and original characterization the superiority of The Tempest is obvious : as a whole, we must always admire the masterly skill which the poet has here displayed in the economy of his means, and the dexterity with which he has disguised his preparations—the scaffoldings for the wonderful ærial structure. . . .

The Tempest has little action or progressive movement ; the union of Ferdinand and Miranda is settled at their first interview, and Prospero merely throws apparent obstacles in their way ; the shipwrecked band go leisurely about the island ; the attempts of Sebastian and Antonio on the life of the King of Naples, and the plot of Caliban and the drunken sailors against Prospero, are nothing but a feint, for we foresee that they will be completely frustrated by the magical skill of the latter ; nothing remains, therefore, but the punishment of the guilty by dreadful sights which harrow up their consciences, and then the discovery and final reconciliation. Yet this want of movement is so admirably concealed by the most varied display of the fascinations of poetry and the exhilaration of mirth, the details of the execution are so very attractive, that it requires no small degree of attention to perceive that the dénouement is, in some degree, anticipated in the exposition. The history of the loves of Ferdinand and Miranda, developed in a few short scenes, is enchantingly beautiful : an affecting union of chivalrous magnanimity on the one part, and on the other of the virgin openness of a heart which, brought up far from the world on an uninhabited island, has never learned to disguise its innocent movements. The wisdom of the princely hermit Prospero has a magical and mysterious air ; the disagreeable impression left by the black falsehood of the two usurpers is softened by the honest gossiping of the old and faithful Gonzalo ; Trinculo and Stephano, two good-for-nothing drunkards, find a worthy associate in Caliban ; and Ariel hovers sweetly over the whole as the personified genius of the wonderful fable.

* Black's translation.

Caliban has become a by-word as the strange creation of a poetical imagination. A mixture of gnome and savage, half dæmon, half brute, in his behaviour we perceive at once the traces of his native disposition, and the influence of Prospero's education. The latter could only unfold his understanding, without, in the slightest degree, taming his rooted malignity : it is as if the use of reason and human speech were communicated to an awkward ape. In inclination Caliban is malicious, cowardly, false, and base ; and yet he is essentially different from the vulgar knaves of a civilized world, as portrayed occasionally by Shakespeare. He is rude, but not vulgar ; he never falls into the prosaic and low familiarity of his drunken associates, for he is, in his way, a poetical being ; he always speaks in verse. He has picked up every thing dissonant and thorny in language to compose out of it a vocabulary of his own ; and of the whole variety of nature, the hateful, repulsive, and pettily deformed have alone been impressed on his imagination. The magical world of spirits, which the staff of Prospero has assembled on the island, casts merely a faint reflection into his mind, as a ray of light which falls into a dark cave, incapable of communicating to it either heat or illumination, serves merely to set in motion the poisonous vapours. The delineation of this monster is throughout inconceivably consistent and profound, and, notwithstanding its hatefulness, by no means hurtful to our feelings, as the honour of human nature is left untouched.

In the zephyr-like Ariel the image of air is not to be mistaken; his name even bears an allusion to it; as, on the other hand, Caliban signifies the heavy element of earth. Yet they are neither of them simple, allegorical personifications, but beings individually determined. In general we find in The Midsummer-Night's Dream, in The Tempest, in the magical part of Macbeth, and wherever Shakespeare avails himself of the popular belief in the invisible presence of spirits, and the possibility of coming in contact with them, a profound view of the inward life of Nature and her mysterious springs, which, it is true, can never be altogether unknown to the genuine poet, as poetry is altogether incompatible with mechanical physics, but which few have possessed in an equal degree with Dante and himself.

[From Mrs. Jameson's "Characteristics of Women."]

We might have deemed it impossible to go beyond Viola, Perdita, and Ophelia as pictures of feminine beauty; to exceed the one in tender delicacy, the other in ideal grace, and the last in simplicity, if Shakespeare had not done this; and he alone could have done it. Had he never created a Miranda, we should never have been made to feel how completely the purely natural and the purely ideal can blend into each other.

The character of Miranda resolves itself into the very elements of womanhood. She is beautiful, modest, and tender, and she is these only; they comprise her whole being, external and internal. She is so perfectly unsophisticated, so delicately refined, that she is all but ethereal. Let us imagine any other woman placed beside Miranda—even one of Shakespeare's own loveliest and sweetest creations—there is not one of them that could sustain the comparison for a moment; not one that would not appear somewhat coarse or artificial when brought into immediate contact with this pure child of nature, this “Eve of an enchanted Paradise.”

What, then, has Shakespeare done?—“O wondrous skill and sweet wit of the man!”—he has removed Miranda far from all comparison with her own sex; he has placed her between the demi-demon of earth and the delicate spirit of air. The next step is into the ideal and supernatural; and the only being who approaches Miranda, with whom she can be contrasted, is Ariel. Beside the subtle essence of this ethereal sprite, this creature of elemental light and air, that “ran upon the winds, rode the curl'd clouds, and in the colours of the rainbow lived,” Miranda herself appears a palpable reality, a woman, “breathing thoughtful breath,” a woman, walking the earth in her mortal loveliness, with a heart as frail-strung, as passion-touched, as ever fluttered in a female bosom.

I have said that Miranda possesses merely the elementary attributes of womanhood, but each of these stands in her with a distinct and peculiar grace. She resembles nothing upon earth; but do we therefore compare her, in our own minds, with any of those fabled beings with which the fancy of ancient poets peopled the forest depths, the fountain or the ocean?—oread or dryad fleet, sea-maid, or naiad of the stream? We cannot think of them together. Miranda is a consistent, natural human being. Our impression of her nymph-like beauty, her peerless grace, and purity of soul, has a distinct and individual character. Not only is she exquisitely lovely, being what she is, but we are made to feel that she could not possibly be otherwise than as she is portrayed. She has never beheld one of her own sex; she has never caught from society one imitated or artificial grace. The impulses which have come to her, in her enchanted solitude, are of heaven and nature, not of the world and its vanities. She has sprung up into beauty beneath the eye of her father, the princely magician ; her companions have been the rocks and woods, the many-shaped, many-tinted clouds, and the silent stars ; her playmates the ocean billows, that stooped their foamy crests, and ran rippling to kiss her feet. Ariel and his attendant sprites hovered over her head, ministered duteous to her every wish, and presented before her pageants of beauty and grandeur. The very air, made vocal by her father's art, floated in music around her. If we can presuppose such a situation with all its circumstances, do we not behold in the character of Miranda not only the credible, but the natural, the necessary results of such a situation ? She retains her woman's heart, for that is unalterable and inalienable, as a part of her being ; but her deportment, her looks, her language, her thoughts—all these, from the supernatural and poetical circumstances around her, assume a cast of the pure ideal ; and to us, who are in the secret of her human and pitying nature, nothing can be more charming and consistent than the effect which she produces upon others, who, never having beheld any thing resembling her, approach her as “a wonder,” as something celestial :

Most sure, the goddess on whom these airs attend !

And again :

What is this maid ?

Is she the goddess who hath severed us,
And brought us thus together ?

Contrasted with the impression of her refined and dignified beauty, and its effect on all beholders, is Miranda's own soft simplicity, her virgin innocence, her total ignorance of the conventional forms and language of society. It is most natural that in a being thus constituted, the first tears should spring from compassion, “suffering with those that she saw suffer ;” and that her first sigh should be offered to a love at once fearless and submissive, delicate and fond. She has no taught scruples of honour like Juliet ; no coy concealments like Viola ; no assumed dignity standing in its own defence. Her bashfulness is less a quality than an instinct ; it is like the self-folding of a flower, spontaneous and unconscious. I suppose there is nothing of the kind in poetry equal to the scene between Ferdinand and Miranda. In Ferdinand, who is a noble creature, we have all the chivalrous magnanimity with which man, in a high state of civilization, disguises his real superiority, and does humble homage to the being of whose destiny he disposes ; while Miranda, the mere child of nature, is struck with wonder at her own new emotions. Only conscious of her own weakness as a woman, and ignorant of those usages of society which teach us to dissemble the real passion, and assume (and sometimes abuse) an unreal and transient power, she is equally ready to place her life, her love, her service beneath his feet. . . .

As Miranda, being what she is, could only have had a Ferdinand for a lover, and an Ariel for her attendant, so she could have had with propriety no other father than the majestic and gifted being who fondly claims her as “a thread of his own life—nay, that for which he lives.” Prospero, with his magical powers, his superhuman wisdom, his moral worth and grandeur, and his kingly dignity, is one of the most sublime visions that ever swept with ample robes, pale brow, and sceptred hand, before the eye of fancy. He controls the invisible world, and works through the agency of spirits ; not by any evil and forbidden compact, but solely by superior might of intellect—by potent spells gathered from the lore of ages, and abjured when he mingles again as a man with his fellow-men. He is as distinct a being from the necromancers and astrologers celebrated in Shakespeare’s age as can well be imagined :* and all the wizards of poetry and fiction, even

* Such as Cornelius Agrippa, Michael Scott, Dr. Dee. The last was the contemporary of Shakespeare.

Faust and St. Leon, sink into commonplaces before the princely, the philosophic, the benevolent Prospero.

[From Hazlitt's "Characters of Shakespear's Plays."*]

The Tempest is one of the most original and perfect of Shakespear's productions, and he has shown in it all the variety of his powers. It is full of grace and grandeur. The human and imaginary characters, the dramatic and the grotesque, are blended together with the greatest art, and without any appearance of it. Though he has here given "to airy nothing a local habitation and a name," yet that part which is only the fantastic creation of his mind has the same palpable texture, and coheres "semlably" with the rest. As the preternatural part has the air of reality, and almost haunts the imagination with a sense of truth, the real characters and events partake of the wildness of a dream. The stately magician Prospero, driven from his dukedom, but around whom (so potent is his art) airy spirits throng numberless to do his bidding; his daughter Miranda ("worthy of that name"), to whom all the power of his art points, and who seems the goddess of the isle; the princely Ferdinand, cast by fate upon the haven of his happiness in this idol of his love; the delicate Ariel; the savage Caliban, half brute, half demon; the drunken ship's crew—are all connected parts of the story, and can hardly be spared from the place they fill. Even the local scenery is of a piece and character with the subject. Prospero's enchanted island seems to have risen up out of the sea; the airy music, the tempest-tossed vessel, the turbulent waves, all have the effect of the landscape background of some fine picture. Shakespear's pencil is (to use an allusion of his own) "like the dyer's hand, subdued to what it works in." Everything in him, though it partakes of "the liberty of wit," is also subjected to "the law" of the understanding. For instance, even the drunken sailors, who are made reeling ripe, share, in the disorder of their minds and bodies, in the tumult of the elements, and seem on shore to be as much at the mercy of chance as they were before at the mercy of the wind and waves. These fellows with their sea-wit are the least to our taste of any part of the play ; but they are as like drunken sailors as they can be, and are an indirect foil to Caliban, whose figure acquires a classical dignity in the comparison.

* Edited by Wm. Carew Hazlitt (London, 1869), p. 82 foll.

The character of Caliban is generally thought (and justly so) to be one of the author's masterpieces. It is not indeed pleasant to see this character on the stage, any more than it is to see the god Pan personated there. But in itself it is one of the wildest and most abstracted of all Shakespear's characters, whose deformity, whether of body or mind, is redeemed by the power and truth of the imagination displayed in it. It is the essence of grossness, but there is not a particle of vulgarity in it. Shakespear has described the brutal mind of Caliban in contact with the pure and original forms of nature ; the character grows out of the soil where it is rooted, uncontrolled, uncouth, and wild, uncramped by any of the meanesses of custom. It is "of the earth, earthy." It seems almost to have been dug out of the ground, with a soul instinctively superadded to it answering to its wants and origin. Vulgarity is not natural coarseness, but conventional coarseness, learned from others, contrary to, or without an entire conformity of natural power and disposition ; as fashion is the commonplace affectation of what is elegant and refined without any feeling of the essence of it. Schlegel, the admirable German critic of Shakespear, observes that Caliban is a poetical character, and "always speaks in blank verse." . . .

In conducting Stephano and Trinculo to Prospero's cell, Caliban shows the superiority of natural capacity over greater knowledge and greater folly ; and in a former scene, when Ariel frightens them with his music, Caliban, to encourage them, accounts for it in the eloquent poetry of the senses :

"Be not afeard ; the isle is full of noises,
 Sounds and sweet airs, that give delight and hurt not.
 Sometimes a thousand twangling instruments
 Will hum about mine ears ; and sometimes voices,
 That, if I then had wak'd after long sleep,
 Will make me sleep again : and then, in dreaming,
 The clouds, methought, would open, and show riches
 Ready to drop upon me ; that when I wak'd
 I cried to dream again."

This is not more beautiful than it is true. The poet here shows us the savage with the simplicity of a child. Shakespeare had to paint the human animal rude and without choice in its pleasures, but not without the sense of pleasure or some germ of the affections. Master Barnardine, in Measure for Measure, the savage of civilized life, is an admirable philosophical counterpart to Caliban.

Shakespeare has, as it were by design, drawn off from Caliban the elements of whatever is ethereal and refined, to compound them in the unearthly mould of Ariel. Nothing was ever more finely conceived than this contrast between the material and the spiritual, the gross and delicate. Ariel is imaginary power, the swiftness of thought personified. When told to make good speed by Prospero, he says, "I drink the air before me." This is something like Puck's boast on a similar occasion, "I'll put a girdle round about the earth in forty minutes." But Ariel differs from Puck in having a fellow-feeling in the interests of those he is employed about. How exquisite is the following dialogue between him and Prospero !

"Ariel. Your charm so strongly works them,
 That if you now beheld them, your affections
 Would become tender.

Prospero. Dost thou think so, spirit ?

Ariel. Mine would, sir, were I human.

Prospero. And mine shall
 Hast thou, which art but air, a touch, a feeling
 Of their afflictions, and shall not myself,

One of their kind, that relish all as sharply
 Passion as they, be kindlier moved than thou art?

It has been observed that there is a peculiar charm in the songs introduced in Shakespear, which, without conveying any distinct images, seem to recall all the feelings connected with them, like snatches of half-forgotten music heard indistinctly and at intervals. There is this effect produced by Ariel's songs, which (as we are told) seem to sound in the air, and as if the person playing them were invisible.

[From Franz Horn's "Shakespeare's Schauspiele Erläutert."*]

In Prospero we have a delineation of peculiar profundity. He was once not altogether a just prince, not thoroughly a just man ; but he had the disposition to be both. His soul thirsted after knowledge ; his mind, sincere in itself, after love ; and his fancy, after the secrets of nature ; but he forgot, what a prince should least of all forget, that, upon this moving earth, superior acquirements, in order to stand firmly, must be exercised carefully ; that the world is full of enemies who can only be subdued by a watchful power and prudence, and that in certain situations the armour ought never to be put off. Thus it became easy for his nearest relation, his brother, with the help of a powerful neighbouring king who could not resist the offered but unjustifiable advantage, to depose him from his dukedom. But as the pure morals of the prince, although they were perhaps but lazily exercised in behalf of his subjects, had nevertheless gained him their love, and the usurper did not dare to make an attack on the lives of the fallen, Prospero saved himself, his daughter, and a part of his magical books, upon a desert island. Here he becomes, what, in its highest sense, he had not yet been, a father and prince. His knowledge extends. Nature listens to him, perhaps because he learned to know and love her more inwardly. Zephyr-like spirits, full of a tender frolicsome humour, and rude earth-born gnomes, are compelled to serve him. The whole island is full of wonders, but only such as the fancy willingly receives, of sounds and songs, of merry helpers and comical tormentors ; and Prospero shows his great human wisdom particularly in the manner with which he, as the spiritual centre, knows how to conduct his intercourse with friends and foes. . . .

* Knight's translation, with a few verbal changes.

In Caliban there is a curious mixture of devil, man, and beast. He desires evil, not for the sake of evil or from mere wickedness, but because it is piquant, and because he feels himself oppressed. He is convinced that gross injustice has been done him, and thus he does not rightly feel that what he desires may be wicked. He knows perfectly well how powerful Prospero is, whose art may perhaps even subdue his maternal god Setebos, and that he himself is unfortunately nothing but a slave. Nevertheless, he cannot cease to curse, and certainly with the gusto of a virtuoso in this more than liberal art. Whatever he can find most base and disgusting he surrounds almost artistically with the most inharmonious murmuring and hissing words, and then wishes them to fall upon Prospero and his lovely daughter. He knows very well that all this will help him nothing, but that at night he will have "cramps," and "side-stitches," and be "pinched by urchins," but still he continues to pour out new curses. He has acquired one fixed idea—that the island belonged to his mother, and, consequently, now to himself, the crown prince. The greatest horrors are pleasant to him, for he feels them only as jests which break the monotony of his slavery. He laments that he had been prevented from completing a frightful sin, "Would it had been done," etc. ; and the thought of a murder gives him a real enjoyment, perhaps chiefly on account of the noise and confusion that it would produce.

Recognizing all this, yet our feelings towards him never rise to a thorough hatred. We find him only laughably horrible, and as a marvellous, though at bottom a feeble monster, highly interesting, for we foresee from the first that none of his threats will be fulfilled. Caliban could scarcely at any time have been made out more in detail, but we are well enabled to seize upon the idea of his inner physiognomy from the naked sketch of his external form. He is, with all his foolish rage and wickedness, not entirely vulgar ; and though he allows himself to be imposed upon, even by his miserable comrades (perhaps only because they are men, and, if ugly, yet handsomer than himself), he everywhere shows more prudence, which is only checked because he considers himself more powerful than he really is. Indeed, he stands far higher than Trinculo and Stephano.

Opposed to him stands Ariel, by no means an ethereal, featureless angel, but as a real airy and frolicsome spirit, agreeable and open, but also capricious, roguish, and, with his other qualities, somewhat mischievous. He is thankful to Prospero for his release from the most confined of all confined situations, but his gratitude is not a natural virtue (we might almost add, not an airy virtue) ; therefore he must (like man) be sometimes reminded of his debt, and held in check. Only the promise of his freedom in two days restores him again to his amiability, and he then finds pleasure in executing the plans of his master with a delightful activity.

We noticed in passing "the featureless angel," and it requires no further indication where to find such beings ; for no one will deny that these immortal winged children (so charming in many old German pictures), with their somewhat dull immortal harps, and, if possible, their still more dull and immortal anthems cause a not less immortal tediousness in the works of many poets. Shakespeare did not fall into this error, and it is in the highest degree attractive to observe the various and safe modes in which he manages the marvellous. In the storm he achieves his object by the simplest means, while, as has been already indicated, he represents Nature herself, and certainly justly, as the greatest miracle. When he has once in his own gentle way led us to believe that Prospero, through his high art, is able to overrule Nature—and how willingly do we believe in these higher powers of man!—how completely natural, and, to a certain degree, what merely pleasant trifles, are all the wonders which we see playing around us! These higher powers, also, are not confined to Prospero alone; Ferdinand and Miranda have, without any enchanted wand or any prolix instruction, full superiority over the wonders of nature, and they allow them to pass around them merely as a delightful drama; for the highest wonder is in their own breasts—love, the pure human, and even on that account holy, love.

Even the pure mind and the firm heart, as they are shown in old Gonzalo, are armed with an almost similar power. With our poet, a truly moral man is always amiable, powerful, agreeable, and quietly wards off the snares laid for him. This old Gonzalo is so entirely occupied with his duty, in which alone he finds his pleasure, that he scarcely notices the gnats of wit with which his opponents persecute him; or, if he observes, easily and firmly repels them. What wit indeed has he to fear, who, in a sinking ship, has power remaining to sustain himself and others with genuine humour? Shakespeare seems scarcely to recognize a powerless virtue, and he depicts it only in cases of need; so everything closes satisfactorily. The pure poetry of nature and genius inspires us; and when we hear Prospero recite his far too modest epilogue, after laying down his enchanted wand, we have no wish to turn our minds to any frivolous thoughts, for the magic we have experienced was too charming and too mighty not to be enduring.

[From Verplanck's Introduction to the Play.]

The Tempest is one of those works for which no other production of the author's prolific fancy could have prepared his readers. It is wholly of a different cast of temper, and mood of disposition, from those so conspicuous in his gayer comedies ; while even the ethical dignity and poetic splendour of The Merchant of Venice could not well lead the critic to anticipate the solemn grandeur, the unrivalled harmony and grace, the bold originality, and the grave beauty of The Tempest. . . .

There are several respects in which the play thus stands alone as distinguishable in character from any other of its author's varied creations. Without being his work of greatest power, not equalling several other of the dramas in depth of passion, or in the exhibition of the working of the affections ; surpassed by others in brilliancy of poetic fancy or exquisite delicacies of expression, it is nevertheless among the most perfect (perhaps, in fact, the most perfect) of all, as a work of art, of the most unbroken unity of effect and sustained majesty of intellect. It is, too—if we can speak of degrees of originality in the productions of this most creative of all poets—the most purely original of his conceptions, deriving nothing of any consequence from any other source for the plot, and without any prototype in literature of the more important personages, or any model for the thoughts and language, beyond the materials presented by actual and living human nature, to be raised and idealized into the “wild and wondrous” forms of Ariel and Caliban, of the majestic Prospero, and, above all, of his peerless daughter. Miranda is a character blending the truth of nature with the most exquisite refinement of poetic fancy, unrivalled even in Shakespeare's own long and beautiful series of portraitures of feminine excellence, and paralleled only by the Eve of Milton, who, I cannot but think, was indirectly indebted for some of her most fascinating attributes to the solitary daughter of Prospero.

Caliban, a being without example or parallel in poetic invention, degraded in mind, as well as in moral affections, below the level of humanity, and yet essentially and purely poetical in all his conceptions and language, is a creation to whose originality and poetic truth every critic, from Dryden downward, has paid homage. Nor is it a less striking peculiarity that the only buffoon characters and dialogue in the drama are those of the sailors, who seem to be introduced for the single purpose of contrasting the grossness and lowness of civilized vice with the nobler forms of savage and untutored depravity.

It is partly on account of this perfect novelty of invention, and probably still more from the fairy and magical machinery of the plot, that the later critics have designated The Tempest as specially belonging to the Romantic Drama. Yet to me it appears, not only in its structure, but in its taste and feeling, to bear a more classical character, and to be more assimilated to the higher Grecian drama, in its spirit, than any other of its author's works, or indeed any other poem of his age. The rules of the Greek stage, as to the unities of time and place, are fully complied with. This cannot well be the result of accident, for in an age of classical translation, and learned (even pedantic) imitation, it needed no classical learning to make the unities known to any dramatic author; and as Shakespeare had, in his other plays, totally rejected them, he would seem here to have expressly designed to conform his plot to their laws. But there also appears to me to be something in the poetic character and tone of the drama, approaching to the spirit and manner of the Greek dramatic poetry, which can certainly not be ascribed to intentional imitation, any more than to the unconscious resemblance often produced by habitual familiarity with favourite models. It has nothing of the air of learned and elaborate imitation which, in the works of Tasso, and Milton, and Gray, make the scholar everywhere as perceptible as the poet. But it is the resemblance of solemn thought, of calm dignity, of moral wisdom, of the dramatic dialogue in its most majestic form, passing now into the lyrical and now into the didactic or ethical. This resemblance of taste and feeling is rendered more striking by a similar bold and free invention and combination of poetic diction, making the English language as flexible as the Greek to every shade of thought. In all these respects, the resemblance to antiquity goes just far enough to show that its result is not artificial or intentional, but the result of the same mental causes operating upon the author's poetic temperament and taste at the time, which predominated in forming the "lofty grave tragedians" of ancient Athens.

ARIEL AS A SEA-NYMPH.

NAPLES.

THE TEMPEST.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

ALONSO, King of Naples.
 SEBASTIAN, his brother.
 PROSPERO, the right Duke of Milan.
 ANTONIO, his brother, the usurping Duke of Milan.
 FERDINAND, son to the King of Naples.
 GONZALO, an honest old Counsellor.
 ADRIAN, } Lords
 FRANCISCO, }
 CALIBAN, a savage and deformed Slave.
 TRINCULO, a Jester.
 STEPHANO, a drunken Butler.

Master of a Ship, Boatswain, Mariners.

MIRANDA, daughter to Prospero.

ARIEL, an airy Spirit.

It is,

CERES,

JUNO,

Nymphs,

Reapers,

} presented by Spirits.

Other Spirits attending on Prospero.

SCENE: A ship at sea: an uninhabited island.

ACT I.

SCENE I. On a Ship at Sea : a tempestuous noise of thunder and lightning heard.

Enter a Ship-master and a Boatswain.

Master. Boatswain !

Boatswain. Here, master ; what cheer ?

Master. Good, speak to the mariners : fall to 't, yarely, or we run ourselves aground ; bestir, bestir !

[Exit.

Enter Mariners.

Boatswain. Heigh, my hearts! cheerly, cheerly, my hearts! yare, yare! Take in the topsail. Tend to the master's whistle.—Blow till thou burst thy wind, if room enough!

Enter ALONSO, SEBASTIAN, ANTONIO, FERDINAND, GONZALO, and others.

Alonso. Good boatswain, have care. Where's the master? Play the men.

Boatswain. I pray now, keep below. 10

Antonio. Where is the master, boatswain?

Boatswain. Do you not hear him? You mar our labour. Keep your cabins; you do assist the storm.

Gonzalo. Nay, good, be patient.

Boatswain. When the sea is. Hence! What cares these roarers for the name of king? To cabin! Silence! trouble us not. 17

Gonzalo. Good, yet remember whom thou hast aboard.

Boatswain. None that I love more than myself. You are a counsellor; if you can command these elements to silence, and work the peace of the present, we will not hand a rope more. Use your authority; if you cannot, give thanks you have lived so long, and make yourself ready in your cabin for the mischance of the hour, if it so hap.—Cheerly, good hearts!—Out of our way, I say. [Exit.]

Gonzalo. I have great comfort from this fellow: methinks he hath no drowning mark upon him; his complexion is perfect gallows. Stand fast, good Fate, to his hanging! Make the rope of his destiny our cable, for our own doth little advantage! If he be not born to be hanged, our case is miserable. [Exeunt.]

Enter Boatswain.

Boatswain. Down with the topmast! yare! lower, lower!

Bring her to try wi' the main-course. [A cry within.] A plague upon this howling! they are louder than the weather or our office.—

35

Enter SEBASTIAN, ANTONIO, and GONZALO.

Yet again! what do you here? Shall we give o'er, and drown? Have you a mind to sink?

Sebastian. A plague o' your throat, you bawling, blasphemous, incharitable dog!

Boatswain. Work you, then.

40

Antonio. Hang, cur! hang, you whoreson, insolent noisemaker! We are less afraid to be drowned than thou art.

Gonzalo. I'll warrant him for drowning, though the ship were no stronger than a nutshell.

Boatswain. Lay her a-hold, a-hold! Set her two courses. Off to sea again; lay her off.

Enter Mariners wet.

Mariners. All lost! to prayers, to prayers! all lost!

Boatswain. What! must our mouths be cold?

Gonzalo. The king and prince at prayers! Let 's assist them,

For our case is as theirs.

Sebastian. I'm out of patience.

50

Antonio. We are merely cheated of our lives by drunkards.—

This wide-chapp'd rascal,—would thou mightst lie drowning
The washing of ten tides!

Gonzalo. He'll be hang'd yet,
Though every drop of water swear against it,
And gape at wid'st to glut him.

[A confused noise within.] 'Mercy on us!'

'We split, we split!'

'Farewell, my wife and children!'

'Farewell, brother!'

'We split, we split, we split!'

57

Antonio. Let 's all sink with the king.

[Exit.]

Sebastian. Let's take leave of him. [Exit.

Gonzalo. Now would I give a thousand furlongs of sea for an acre of barren ground ; long heath, brown furze, any thing. The wills above be done ! but I would fain die a dry death. [Exit.

SCENE II. The Island. Before Prospero's Cell.

Enter PROSPERO and MIRANDA.

Miranda. If by your art, my dearest father, you have Put the wild waters in this roar, allay them.
The sky, it seems, would pour down stinking pitch,
But that the sea, mounting to the welkin's cheek,
Dashes the fire out. O, I have suffer'd
With those that I saw suffer ! A brave vessel,
Who had, no doubt, some noble creature in her,
Dash'd all to pieces. O, the cry did knock Against my very heart ! Poor souls, they perish'd !
Had I been any god of power, I would Have sunk the sea within the earth, or ere
It should the good ship so have swallow'd and
The fraughting souls within her.

10

Prospero. Be collected ;
No more amazement. Tell your piteous heart
There's no harm done.

Miranda. O, woe the day !

Prospero. No harm.

I have done nothing but in care of thee,
Of thee, my dear one, thee, my daughter, who
Art ignorant of what thou art, nought knowing
Of whence I am, nor that I am more better
Than Prospero, master of a full poor cell,
And thy no greater father.

20

Miranda. More to know
Did never meddle with my thoughts.

Prospero. 'T is time—

I should inform thee farther. Lend thy hand,
And pluck my magic garment from me.—So:

[Lays down his mantle.

Lie there, my art.—Wipe thou thine eyes; have comfort.
The direful spectacle of the wrack, which touch'd
The very virtue of compassion in thee,
I have with such provision in mine art
So safely order'd, that there is no soul—
No, not so much perdition as an hair
Betid to any creature in the vessel
Which thou heard'st cry, which thou saw'st sink. Sit down;
For thou must now know farther.

30

Miranda. You have often
Begun to tell me what I am, but stopp'd
And left me to a bootless inquisition,
Concluding,—‘Stay, not yet.’

Prospero. The hour's now come;
The very minute bids thee ope thine ear:
Obey, and be attentive. Canst thou remember
A time before we came unto this cell?
I do not think thou canst, for then thou wast not
Out three years old.

40

Miranda. Certainly, sir, I can.

Prospero. By what? by any other house or person?
Of any thing the image tell me that
Hath kept with thy remembrance.

Miranda. 'T is far off,
And rather like a dream than an assurance
That my remembrance warrants. Had I not Four or five women once that tended me?

Prospero. Thou hadst, and more, Miranda. But how is it
That this lives in thy mind? What seest thou else
In the dark backward and abysm of time?
If thou remember'st aught ere thou cam'st here,
How thou cam'st here thou mayst.

50

Miranda. But that I do not.

Prospero. Twelve year since, Miranda, twelve year since,
Thy father was the Duke of Milan and
A prince of power.

Miranda. Sir, are not you my father?

Prospero. Thy mother was a piece of virtue, and
She said thou wast my daughter; and thy father
Was Duke of Milan; and his only heir
And princess, no worse issued.

Miranda. O the heavens!
What foul play had we, that we came from thence?
Or blessed was 't we did?

60

Prospero. Both, both, my girl;
By foul play, as thou say'st, were we heav'd thence,
But blessedly help hither.

Miranda. O, my heart bleeds
To think o' the teen that I have turn'd you to,
Which is from my remembrance! Please you, farther.

Prospero. My brother, and thy uncle, call'd Antonio,—
I pray thee, mark me,—that a brother should
Be so perfidious!—he whom, next thyself,
Of all the world I lov'd, and to him put
The manage of my state; as at that time
Through all the signiories it was the first,
And Prospero the prime duke, being so reputed
In dignity, and, for the liberal arts,
Without a parallel; those being all my study,
The government I cast upon my brother,
And to my state grew stranger, being transported
And rapt in secret studies. Thy false uncle—
Dost thou attend me?

70

Miranda. Sir, most heedfully.

Prospero. Being once perfected how to grant suits,
How to deny them, who to advance, and who
To trash for overtopping, new created

80

The creatures that were mine, I say, or chang'd 'em,
 Or else new form'd 'em ; having both the key
 Of officer and office, set all hearts i' the state
 To what tune pleas'd his ear, that now he was
 The ivy which had hid my princely trunk,
 And suck'd my verdure out on 't.—Thou attend'st not.

Miranda. O, good sir, I do!

Prospero. I pray thee, mark me.

I, thus neglecting worldly ends, all dedicated
 To closeness and the bettering of my mind
 With that which, but by being so retir'd,
 O'er-priz'd all popular rate, in my false brother
 Awak'd an evil nature ; and my trust,
 Like a good parent, did beget of him
 A falsehood, in it's contrary as great
 As my trust was ; which had indeed no limit,
 A confidence sans bound. He being thus lorded,
 Not only with what my revenue yielded,
 But what my power might else exact—like one
 Who having unto truth, by telling of it,
 Made such a sinner of his memory,
 'To credit his own lie—he did believe
 He was indeed the duke, out o' the substitution,
 And executing the outward face of royalty,
 With all prerogative ; hence his ambition
 Growing,—dost thou hear?

90

100

Miranda. Your tale, sir, would cure deafness.

Prospero. To have no screen between this part he play'd
 And him he play'd it for, he needs will be Absolute Milan. Me, poor man!—my library
 Was dukedom large enough. Of temporal royalties
 He thinks me now incapable ; confederates—
 So dry he was for sway—wi' the King of Naples
 To give him annual tribute, do him homage,
 Subject his coronet to his crown, and bend

110

The dukedom yet unbow'd—alas, poor Milan!—
To most ignoble stooping.

Miranda. O the heavens!

Prospero. Mark his condition, and the event; then tell me
If this might be a brother.

Miranda. I should sin
To think but nobly of my grandmother;
Good wombs have borne bad sons.

Prospero. Now the condition. 120

This King of Naples, being an enemy
To me inveterate, hearkens my brother's suit;
Which was, that he, in lieu o' the premises,
Of homage and I know not how much tribute,
Should presently extirpate me and mine
Out of the dukedom, and confer fair Milan,
With all the honours, on my brother: whereon,
A treacherous army levied, one midnight
Fated to the purpose, did Antonio open
The gates of Milan; and, i' the dead of darkness,
The ministers for the purpose hurried thence
Me and thy crying self.

130

Miranda. Alack, for pity!
I, not remembering how I cried out then,
Will cry it o'er again; it is a hint
That wrings my eyes to 't.

Prospero. Hear a little further,
And then I'll bring thee to the present business
Which now's upon's; without the which this story
Were most impertinent.

Miranda. Wherefore did they not
That hour destroy us?

Prospero. Well demanded, wench;
My tale provokes that question. Dear, they durst not,
So dear the love my people bore me, nor set
A mark so bloody on the business, but 140

With colors fairer painted their foul ends.
 In few, they hurried us aboard a bark,
 Bore us some leagues to sea, where they prepar'd
 A rotten carcass of a boat, not rigg'd,
 Nor tackle, sail, nor mast; the very rats
 Instinctively have quit it. There they hoist us,
 To cry to the sea that roar'd to us; to sigh
 To the winds, whose pity, sighing back again,
 Did us but loving wrong.

150

Miranda.

Alack, what trouble

Was I then to you!

Prospero.

O, a cherubin

Thou wast, that did preserve me! Thou didst smile,
 Infused with a fortitude from heaven,
 When I have deck'd the sea with drops full salt,
 Under my burthen groan'd; which rais'd in me
 An undergoing stomach, to bear up Against what should ensue.

Miranda.

How came we ashore?

Prospero. By Providence divine.

Some food we had and some fresh water that
 A noble Neapolitan, Gonzalo,
 Out of his charity, who being then appointed Master of this design, did give us, with Rich garments, linens, stuffs, and necessities,
 Which since have steaded much. So, of his gentleness,
 Knowing I lov'd my books, he furnish'd me,
 From mine own library, with volumes that
 I prize above my dukedom.

160

Miranda.

Would I might

But ever see that man!

Prospero.

Now I arise.—

Sit still, and hear the last of our sea-sorrow.
 Here in this island we arriv'd; and here
 Have I, thy schoolmaster, made thee more profit

170

Than other princess can, that have more time
For vainer hours, and tutors not so careful.

Miranda. Heavens thank you for 't! And now, I pray you, sir,
For still 't is beating in my mind, your reason
For raising this sea-storm?

Prospero. Know thus far forth:
By accident most strange, bountiful Fortune,
Now my dear lady, hath mine enemies
Brought to this shore; and by my prescience 180
I find my zenith doth depend upon
A most auspicious star, whose influence
If now I court not but omit, my fortunes
Will ever after droop. Here cease more questions:
Thou art inclin'd to sleep; 't is a good dulness,
And give it way.—I know thou canst not choose.—

[Miranda sleeps.
Come away, servant, come! I am ready now;
Approach, my Ariel, come!

Enter ARIEL.

Ariel. All hail, great master! grave sir, hail! I come
To answer thy best pleasure; be 't to fly, 190
To swim, to dive into the fire, to ride
On the curl'd clouds, to thy strong bidding task
Ariel and all his quality.

Prospero. Hast thou, spirit,
Perform'd to point the tempest that I bade thee?

Ariel. To every article.
I boarded the king's ship; now on the beak,
Now in the waist, the deck, in every cabin,
I flam'd amazement: sometime I 'd divide,
And burn in many places; on the topmast,
The yards, and bowsprit, would I flame distinctly, 200
Then meet and join. Jove's lightnings, the precursors

O' the dreadful thunder-claps, more momentary
 And sight-outrunning were not; the fire and cracks
 Of sulphurous roaring the most mighty Neptune
 Seem to besiege, and make his bold waves tremble,
 Yea, his dread trident shake.

Prospero.

My brave spirit!

Who was so firm, so constant, that this coil
 Would not infect his reason?

Ariel.

Not a soul

But felt a fever of the mad, and play'd
 Some tricks of desperation. All but mariners Plung'd in the foaming brine, and quit the vessel,
 Then all afire with me: the king's son, Ferdinand,
 With hair up-staring,—then like reeds, not hair,—
 Was the first man that leap'd; cried, 'Hell is empty,
 And all the devils are here.'

210

Prospero.

Why, that's my spirit!

But was not this nigh shore?

Ariel.

Close by, my master.

Prospero. But are they, Ariel, safe?

Ariel.

Not a hair perish'd;

On their sustaining garments not a blemish,
 But fresher than before: and, as thou bad'st me,
 In troops I have dispers'd them 'bout the isle.
 The king's son have I landed by himself;
 Whom I left cooling of the air with sighs
 In an odd angle of the isle, and sitting,
 His arms in this sad knot.

220

Prospero.

Of the king's ship

The mariners, say how thou hast dispos'd,
 And all the rest o' the fleet.

Ariel.

Safely in harbour

Is the king's ship; in the deep nook, where once
 'Thou call'dst me up at midnight to fetch dew
 From the still-vex'd Bermoothes, there she's hid;

The mariners all under hatches stow'd,
 Who, with a charm join'd to their suffer'd labour,
 I have left asleep; and for the rest o' the fleet,
 Which I dispers'd, they all have met again,
 And are upon the Mediterranean flote,
 Bound sadly home for Naples,
 Supposing that they saw the king's ship wrack'd,
 And his great person perish.

230

Prospero. Ariel, thy charge
 Exactly is perform'd; but there's more work.
 What is the time o' the day?

Ariel. Past the mid season.

Prospero. At least two glasses: the time 'twixt six and now
 Must by us both be spent most preciouslly. 241

Ariel. Is there more toil? Since thou dost give me pains,
 Let me remember thee what thou hast promis'd,
 Which is not yet perform'd me.

Prospero. How now? moody?
 What is't thou canst demand?

Ariel. My liberty.

Prospero. Before the time be out? no more!

Ariel. I prithee,
 Remember I have done thee worthy service;
 Told thee no lies, made no mistakings, serv'd
 Without or grudge or grumblings. Thou didst promise
 To bate me a full year.

Prospero. Dost thou forget 250
 From what a torment I did free thee?

Ariel. No.

Prospero. Thou dost; and think'st it much to tread the ooze
 Of the salt deep,
 To run upon the sharp wind of the north,
 To do me business in the veins o' the earth
 When it is bak'd with frost.

Ariel. I do not, sir.

Prospero. Thou liest, malignant thing! Hast thou forgot
The foul witch Sycorax, who with age and envy
Was grown into a hoop? hast thou forgot her?

Ariel. No, sir.

Prospero. Thou hast. Where was she born? speak; tell me.

Ariel. Sir, in Argier.

Prospero. O, was she so? I must 261

Once in a month recount what thou hast been,
Which thou forget'st. This damn'd witch Sycorax,
For mischiefs manifold and sorceries terrible
To enter human hearing, from Argier,
Thou know'st, was banish'd; for one thing she did
They would not take her life. Is not this true?

Ariel. Ay, sir.

Prospero. This blue-eyed hag was hither brought with child,
And here was left by the sailors. Thou, my slave, 270
As thou report'st thyself, wast then her servant;
And, for thou wast a spirit too delicate
To act her earthy and abhorr'd commands,
Refusing her grand hests, she did confine thee,
By help of her more potent ministers,
And in her most unmitigable rage,
Into a cloven pine; within which rift
Imprison'd thou didst painfully remain
A dozen years; within which space she died,
And left thee there, where thou didst vent thy groans 280
As fast as mill-wheels strike. Then was this island—
Save for the son that she did litter here,
A freckled whelp, hag-born—not honour'd with
A human shape.

Ariel. Yes, Caliban her son.

Prospero. Dull thing, I say so; he, that Caliban,
Whom now I keep in service. Thou best know'st
What torment I did find thee in; thy groans

Did make wolves howl, and penetrate the breasts
Of ever-angry bears. It was a torment
To lay upon the damn'd, which Sycorax
Could not again undo ; it was mine art,
When I arriv'd and heard thee, that made gape
The pine, and let thee out.

Ariel.

I thank thee, master.

Prospero. If thou more murmur'st, I will rend an oak,
And peg thee in his knotty entrails till
Thou hast howl'd away twelve winters.

Ariel.

Pardon, master ;

I will be correspondent to command,
And do my spriting gently.

Prospero. Do so, and after two days
I will discharge thee.

Ariel.

That's my noble master !

What shall I do ? say what ; what shall I do ?

300

Prospero. Go make thyself like a nymph o' the sea ; be subject

To no sight but thine and mine, invisible
To every eyeball else. Go, take this shape,
And hither come in 't ; go, hence with diligence !—

[Exit Ariel.

Awake, dear heart, awake ! thou hast slept well ;
Awake !

Miranda. The strangeness of your story put Heaviness in me.

Prospero. Shake it off. Come on ;
We'll visit Caliban my slave, who never Yields us kind answer.

Miranda. 'T is a villain, sir,
I do not love to look on.

Prospero. But, as 't is,
We cannot miss him ; he does make our fire,
Fetch in our wood, and serves in offices

310

That profit us.—What, ho ! slave ! Caliban !

Thou earth, thou ! speak.

Caliban [Within]. There 's wood enough within.

Prospero. Come forth, I say ! there 's other business for thee ;
Come, thou tortoise ! when ?—

Enter ARIEL, like a water-nymph.

Fine apparition ! My quaint Ariel,

Hark in thine ear.

Ariel. My lord, it shall be done. [Exit.

Prospero. Thou poisonous slave, come forth !

Enter CALIBAN.

Caliban. As wicked dew as e'er my mother brush'd 320
With raven's feather from unwholesome fen
Drop on you both ! a south-west blow on ye,
And blister you all o'er ?

Prospero. For this, be sure, to-night thou shalt have cramps,
Side-stitches that shall pen thy breath up ; urchins
Shall, for that vast of night that they may work,
All exercise on thee ; thou shalt be pinch'd
As thick as honeycomb, each pinch more stinging
Than bees that made 'em.

Caliban. I must eat my dinner.
This island 's mine, by Sycorax my mother, 330
Which thou tak'st from me. When thou came'st first,
Thou strok'dst me and mad'st much of me, wouldst give me
Water with berries in 't, and teach me how
To name the bigger light, and how the less,
That burn by day and night ; and then I lov'd thee,
And show'd thee all the qualities o' the isle,
The fresh springs, brine-pits, barren place and fertile.
Cursed be I that did so ! All the charms
Of Sycorax, toads, beetles, bats, light on you !
For I am all the subjects that you have, 340

Which first was mine own king ; and here you sty me
 In this hard rock, whiles you do keep from me
 The rest o' the island.

Prospero. Thou most lying slave,
 Whom stripes may move, not kindness ! I have us'd thee,
 Filth as thou art, with human care, and lodg'd thee
 In mine own cell, till thou didst seek to violate
 The honour of my child.

Caliban. O ho, O ho ! would 't had been done !
 Thou didst prevent me ; I had peopled else
 This isle with Calibans.

Prospero. Abhorred slave,
 Which any print of goodness wilt not take, 350
 Being capable of all ill ! I pitied thee,
 Took pains to make thee speak, taught thee each hour
 One thing or other ; when thou didst not, savage,
 Know thine own meaning, but wouldst gabble like
 A thing most brutish, I endow'd thy purposes
 With words that made them known. But thy vile race,
 Though thou didst learn, had that in 't which good natures
 Could not abide to be with ; therefore wast thou
 Deservedly confin'd into this rock,
 Who hadst deserv'd more than a prison. 360

Caliban. You taught me language ; and my profit on 't
 Is, I know how to curse. The red plague rid you
 For learning me your language !

Prospero. Hag-seed, hence !
 Fetch us in fuel ; and be quick, thou 'rt best,
 To answer other business. Shrug'st thou, malice ?
 If thou neglect'st, or dost unwillingly
 What I command, I 'll rack thee with old cramps,
 Fill all thy bones with aches, make thee roar,
 That beasts shall tremble at thy din.

Caliban. No, pray thee.
 [Aside] I must obey ; his art is of such power,

It would control my dam's god, Setebos,
And make a vassal of him.

Prospero.

So, slave ; hence ! [Exit Caliban.

Enter FERDINAND, and ARIEL (invisible), playing and singing.

Ariel's Song.

*Come unto these yellow sands,
And then take hands :
Curtsied when you have, and kiss'd
The wild waves whist,
Foot it featly here and there ;
And, sweet sprites, the burthen bear.
Hark, hark !*

[Burthen, dispersedly, within. Bow-wow.] 380

The watch-dogs bark.

[Burthen, within. Bow-wow.]

*Hark, hark ! I hear
The strain of strutting chanticleer
Cry, Cock-a-didle-dow.*

Ferdinand. Where should this music be ? i' the air or the earth ?—

It sounds no more ;—and, sure, it waits upon
Some god o' the island. Sitting on a bank,
Weeping again the king my father's wrack,
This music crept by me upon the waters,
Allaying both their fury and my passion
With it's sweet air ; thence I have follow'd it,
Or it hath drawn me rather. But 't is gone.—
No, it begins again.

390

Ariel's Song.

*Full fathom five thy father lies ;
Of his bones are coral made ;
Those are pearls that were his eyes :
Nothing of him that doth fade,*

*But doth suffer a sea-change
 Into something rich and strange.
 Sea-nymphs hourly ring his knell:*

400

[Burthen, within. Ding-dong.]

Hark! now I hear them—Ding-dong, bell.

Ferdinand. The ditty does remember my drown'd father.
 This is no mortal business, nor no sound
 That the earth owes.—I hear it now above me.

Prospero. The fringed curtains of thine eye advance,
 And say what thou seest yond.

Miranda. What is 't? a spirit?
 Lord, how it looks about! Believe me, sir,
 It carries a brave form. But 't is a spirit.

410

Prospero. No, wench; it eats and sleeps and hath such senses

As we have—such. This gallant which thou seest
 Was in the wrack; and, but he's something stain'd
 With grief that's beauty's canker, thou mightst call him
 A goodly person. He hath lost his fellows,
 And strays about to find 'em.

Miranda. I might call him
 A thing divine, for nothing natural
 I ever saw so noble.

Prospero [Aside]. It goes on, I see,
 As my soul prompts it.—Spirit, fine spirit! I'll free thee
 Within two days for this.

Ferdinand. Most sure, the goddess
 On whom these airs attend!—Vouchsafe my prayer
 May know if you remain upon this island;
 And that you will some good instruction give
 How I may bear me here: my prime request,
 Which I do last pronounce, is, O you wonder!
 If you be maid or no?

420

Miranda. No wonder, sir,
 But certainly a maid.

Ferdinand. My language! heavens!—
I am the best of them that speak this speech,
Were I but where 't is spoken.

Prospero. How! the best?
What wert thou, if the King of Naples heard thee? 430

Ferdinand. A single thing, as I am now, that wonders
To hear thee speak of Naples. He does hear me,
And that he does I weep; myself am Naples,
Who with mine eyes, never since at ebb, beheld
The king my father wrack'd.

Miranda. Alack, for mercy!

Ferdinand. Yes, faith, and all his lords; the Duke of Milan
And his brave son being twain.

Prospero [Aside]. The Duke of Milan
And his more braver daughter could control thee,
If now 't were fit to do 't.—At the first sight
They have chang'd eyes.—Delicate Ariel, 440
I'll set thee free for this.—[To him] A word, good sir;
I fear you have done yourself some wrong: a word.

Miranda. Why speaks my father so ungently? This Is the third man that e'er I saw, the first
That e'er I sigh'd for; pity move my father
'To be inclin'd my way!

Ferdinand. O, if a virgin,
And your affection not gone forth, I'll make you
The Queen of Naples.

Prospero. Soft, sir! one word more.— [Aside] They are both in either's powers; but this swift business
I must uneasy make, lest too light winning 450
Make the prize light.—[To him] One word more; I charge thee

That thou attend me. Thou dost here usurp
The name thou owest not, and hast put thyself
Upon this island as a spy, to win it
From me, the lord on 't.

Ferdinand. No, as I am a man.

Miranda. There's nothing ill can dwell in such a temple ;
If the ill spirit have so fair a house,
Good things will strive to dwell with 't.

Prospero. [To Ferdinand] Follow me.—
Speak not you for him ; he's a traitor.—Come ;
I'll manacle thy neck and feet together :
Sea-water shalt thou drink ; thy food shall be
The fresh-brook muscles, wither'd roots, and husks
Wherein the acorn cradled. Follow.

Ferdinand. No ;
I will resist such entertainment till
Mine enemy has more power.

[He draws, and is charmed from moving.]

Miranda. O dear father !
Make not too rash a trial of him, for
He's gentle, and not fearful.

Prospero. What ! I say,
My foot my tutor ?—Put thy sword up, traitor,
Who mak'st a show, but dar'st not strike, thy conscience
Is so possess'd with guilt : come from thy ward ;
For I can here disarm thee with this stick,
And make thy weapon drop.

Miranda. Beseech you, father !

Prospero. Hence ! hang not on my garments.

Miranda. Sir, have pity ;
I'll be his surety.

Prospero. Silence ! one word more Shall make me chide thee, if not hate thee ! What !
An advocate for an impostor ! hush !
Thou think'st there is no more such shapes as he,
Having seen but him and Caliban ; foolish wench !
To the most of men this is a Caliban,
And they to him are angels.

Miranda. My affections

Are, then, most humble ; I have no ambition
To see a goodlier man.

Prospero. [To Ferdinand] Come on ; obey :
Thy nerves are in their infancy again,
And have no vigour in them.

Ferdinand. So they are ;
My spirits, as in a dream, are all bound up.
My father's loss, the weakness which I feel,
The wrack of all my friends, nor this man's threats
To whom I am subdued, are but light to me,
Might I but through my prison once a day
Behold this maid. All corners else o' the earth
Let liberty make use of ; space enough
Have I in such a prison.

490

Prospero. [Aside] It works.—[To Ferdinand] Come on.—
Thou hast done well, fine Ariel !—Follow me.—
[To Ariel] Hark what thou else shalt do me.

Miranda. Be of comfort.
My father's of a better nature, sir,
Than he appears by speech ; this is unwonted
Which now came from him.

Prospero. Thou shalt be as free
As mountain winds ; but then exactly do
All points of my command.

Ariel. To the syllable.

Prospero. Come, follow.—Speak not for him. [Exeunt.

ACT II.

SCENE I. Another Part of the Island.

Enter ALONSO, SEBASTIAN, ANTONIO, GONZALO, ADRIAN,
FRANCISCO, and others.

Gonzalo. Beseech you, sir, be merry ; you have cause—
So have we all—of joy ; for our escape
Is much beyond our loss. Our hint of woe
Is common : every day, some sailor's wife,

The masters of some merchant, and the merchant,
Have just our theme of woe ; but for the miracle—
I mean our preservation—few in millions
Can speak like us : then wisely, good sir, weigh
Our sorrow with our comfort.

Alonso. Prithee, peace.

Sebastian. He receives comfort like cold porridge. 10

Antonio. The visitor will not give him o'er so.

Sebastian. Look, he 's winding up the watch of his wit ; by and by it will strike.

Gonzalo. Sir,—

Sebastian. One ; tell.

Gonzalo. When every grief is entertain'd that 's offer'd,
Comes to the entertainer—

Sebastian. A dollar.

Gonzalo. Dolour comes to him, indeed ; you have spoken truer than you purpos'd. 20

Sebastian. You have taken it wiselier than I meant you should.

Gonzalo. Therefore, my lord,—

Antonio. Fie, what a spendthrift is he of his tongue !

Alonso. I prithee, spare.

Gonzalo. Well, I have done ; but yet,—

Sebastian. He will be talking.

Antonio. Which, of he or Adrian, for a good wager, first begins to crow ?

Sebastian. The old cock. 30

Antonio. The cockerel.

Sebastian. Done. The wager ?

Antonio. A laughter.

Sebastian. A match !

Adrian. Though this island seem to be desert,—

Antonio. Ha, ha, ha !

Sebastian. So, you 're paid.

Adrian. Uninhabitable, and almost inaccessible,—

Sebastian. Yet,—

Adrian. Yet,— 47

Antonio. He could not miss 't.

Adrian. It must needs be of subtle, tender, and delicate temperance.

Antonio. Temperance was a delicate wench.

Sebastian. Ay, and a subtle ; as he most learnedly deliver'd.

Adrian. The air breathes upon us here most sweetly.

Sebastian. As if it had lungs, and rotten ones.

Antonio. Or as 't were perfumed by a fen.

Gonzalo. Here is every thing advantageous to life. 50

Antonio. True ; save means to live.

Sebastian. Of that there 's none, or little.

Gonzalo. How lush and lusty the grass looks ! how green !

Antonio. The ground, indeed, is tawny.

Sebastian. With an eye of green in 't.

Antonio. He misses not much.

Sebastian. No ; he doth but mistake the truth totally.

Gonzalo. But the rarity of it is,—which is indeed almost beyond credit,—

Sebastian. As many vouched rarities are. 60

Gonzalo. That our garments, being, as they were, drenched in the sea, hold, notwithstanding, their freshness and glosses, being rather new-dyed than stained with salt water.

Antonio. If but one of his pockets could speak, would it not say he lies?

Sebastian. Ay, or very falsely pocket up his report.

Gonzalo. Methinks our garments are now as fresh as when we put them on first in Afric, at the marriage of the king's fair daughter Claribel to the King of Tunis.

Sebastian. 'T was a sweet marriage, and we prosper well in our return. 71

Adrian. Tunis was never graced before with such a paragon to their queen.

Gonzalo. Not since widow Dido's time.

Antonio. Widow! a plague o' that! How came that widow in? Widow Dido!

Sebastian. What if he had said widower Æneas too? Good Lord, how you take it!

Adrian. Widow Dido, said you? you make me study of that; she was of Carthage, not of Tunis. 80

Gonzalo. This Tunis, sir, was Carthage.

Adrian. Carthage?

Gonzalo. I assure you, Carthage.

Antonio. His word is more than the miraculous harp.

Sebastian. He hath raised the wall, and houses too.

Antonio. What impossible matter will he make easy next?

Sebastian. I think he will carry this island home in his pocket, and give it his son for an apple.

Antonio. And, sowing the kernels of it in the sea, bring forth more islands. 90

Gonzalo. Ay?

Antonio. Why, in good time.

Gonzalo. Sir, we were talking that our garments seem now as fresh as when we were at Tunis at the marriage of your daughter, who is now queen.

Antonio. And the rarest that e'er came there.

Sebastian. Bate, I beseech you, widow Dido.

Antonio. O, widow Dido! ay, widow Dido.

Gonzalo. Is not, sir, my doublet as fresh as the first day I wore it? I mean, in a sort. 100

Antonio. That sort was well fished for.

Gonzalo. When I wore it at your daughter's marriage?

Alonso. You cram these words into mine ears against The stomach of my sense. Would I had never Married my daughter there! for, coming thence, My son is lost; and, in my rate, she too, Who is so far from Italy remov'd I ne'er again shall see her. O thou mine heir

Of Naples and of Milan, what strange fish
Hath made his meal on thee?

Francisco.

Sir, he may live :

110

I saw him beat the surges under him,
And ride upon their backs ; he trod the water,
Whose enmity he flung aside, and breasted
The surge most swoln that met him ; his bold head
'Bove the contentious waves he kept, and oar'd
Himself with his good arms in lusty stroke
To the shore, that o'er his wave-worn basis bow'd,
As stooping to relieve him. I not doubt
He came alive to land.

Alonso.

No, no, he 's gone.

Sebastian. Sir, you may thank yourself for this great loss,
That would not bless our Europe with your daughter,
But rather lose her to an African ;
Where she at least is banish'd from your eye,
Who hath cause to wet the grief on 't.

121

Alonso.

Prithee, peace.

Sebastian. You were kneel'd to, and importun'd otherwise,
By all of us ; and the fair soul herself
Weigh'd, between loathness and obedience, at Which end o' the beam she'd bow. We have lost your son,
I fear, forever ; Milan and Naples have
Moe widows in them of this business' making,
Than we bring men to comfort them : the fault 's
Your own.

130

Alonso. So is the dear'st o' the loss.

Gonzalo.

My lord Sebastian,

The truth you speak doth lack some gentleness,
And time to speak it in ; you rub the sore,
When you should bring the plaster.

Sebastian.

Very well.

Antonio. And most chirurgeonly.

Gonzalo. It is foul weather in us all, good sir,
When you are cloudy.

Sebastian. Foul weather?

Antonio. Very foul.

Gonzalo. Had I plantation of this isle, my lord,— 140

Antonio. He 'd sow 't with nettle-seed.

Sebastian. Or docks, or mallows.

Gonzalo. And were the king on 't, what would I do?

Sebastian. Scape being drunk, for want of wine.

Gonzalo. I' the commonwealth I would by contraries

Execute all things ; for no kind of traffic

Would I admit ; no name of magistrate ;

Letters should not be known ; riches, poverty,

And use of service, none ; contract, succession,

Bourn, bound of land, tilth, vineyard, none ;

No use of metal, corn, or wine, or oil ; 150

No occupation ; all men idle, all ;

And women too, but innocent and pure ;

No sovereignty ;—

Sebastian. Yet he would be king on 't.

Antonio. The latter end of his commonwealth forgets the beginning.

Gonzalo. All things in common nature should produce

Without sweat or endeavour : treason, felony,

Sword, pike, knife, gun, or need of any engine,

Would I not have ; but nature should bring forth,

Of it own kind, all foison, all abundance, 160

To feed my innocent people.

Sebastian. No marrying 'mong his subjects?

Antonio. None, man ; all idle ; whores and knaves.

Gonzalo. I would with such perfection govern, sir,
To excel the golden age.

Sebastian. Save his majesty!

Antonio. Long live Gonzalo!

Gonzalo. And,—do you mark me, sir?—

Alonso. Prithee, no more ; thou dost talk nothing to me.

Gonzalo. I do well believe your highness ; and did it to minister occasion to these gentlemen, who are of such sensible and nimble lungs that they always use to laugh at nothing. 171

Antonio. 'T was you we laughed at.

Gonzalo. Who, in this kind of merry fooling, am nothing to you ; so you may continue, and laugh at nothing still.

Antonio. What a blow was there given !

Sebastian. An it had not fallen flat-long.

Gonzalo. You are gentlemen of brave mettle ; you would lift the moon out of her sphere, if she would continue in it five weeks without changing.

Enter ARIEL (invisible) playing solemn music.

Sebastian. We would so, and then go a bat-fowling. 180

Antonio. Nay, good my lord, be not angry.

Gonzalo. No, I warrant you ; I will not adventure my discretion so weakly. Will you laugh me asleep, for I am very heavy ?

Antonio. Go sleep, and hear us.

[All sleep except Alonso, Sebastian, and Antonio.]

Alonso. What, all so soon asleep ! I wish mine eyes Would, with themselves, shut up my thoughts ; I find They are inclin'd to do so.

Sebastian. Please you, sir,
Do not omit the heavy offer of it :
It seldom visits sorrow ; when it doth,
It is a comforter. 190

Antonio. We two, my lord,
Will guard your person while you take your rest,
And watch your safety.

Alonso. Thank you.—Wondrous heavy.

[Alonso sleeps. Exit Ariel.]

Sebastian. What a strange drowsiness possesses them !

Antonio. It is the quality o' the climate.

Sebastian. Why

Doth it not then our eyelids sink? I find not Myself dispos'd to sleep.

Antonio. Nor I; my spirits are nimble.
They fell together all, as by consent;
They dropp'd, as by a thunder-stroke. What might,
Worthy Sebastian?—O, what might?—No more.—
And yet methinks I see it in thy face,
What thou shouldst be; the occasion speaks thee, and
My strong imagination sees a crown
Dropping upon thy head.

200

Sebastian. What, art thou waking?

Antonio. Do you not hear me speak?

Sebastian. I do; and surely
It is a sleepy language, and thou speak'st
Out of thy sleep. What is it thou didst say?
This is a strange repose, to be asleep
With eyes wide open; standing, speaking, moving,
And yet so fast asleep.

Antonio. Noble Sebastian,
Thou let'st thy fortune sleep—die, rather; wink'st
Whiles thou art waking.

210

Sebastian. Thou dost snore distinctly;
There's meaning in thy snores.

Antonio. I am more serious than my custom: you Must be so too, if heed me; which to do,
Trebles thee o'er.

Sebastian. Well, I am standing water.

Antonio. I'll teach you how to flow.

Sebastian. Do so; to ebb
Hereditary sloth instructs me.

Antonio. O,
If you but knew how you the purpose cherish
Whiles thus you mock it! how, in stripping it,
You more invest it! Ebbing men, indeed,
Most often do so near the bottom run
By their own fear or sloth.

220

Sebastian. Prithee, say on ;
 The setting of thine eye and cheek proclaim
 A matter from thee, and a birth, indeed,
 Which throes thee much to yield.

Antonio. Thus, sir :
 Although this lord of weak remembrance,—this,
 Who shall be of as little memory
 When he is earth'd,—hath here almost persuaded,—
 For he's a spirit of persuasion, only
 Professes to persuade,—the king his son's alive,
 'T is as impossible that he's undrown'd
 As he that sleeps here swims.

230

Sebastian. I have no hope
 That he's undrown'd.

Antonio. O, out of that no hope
 What great hope have you ! no hope that way is Another way so high a hope that even Ambition can not pierce a wink beyond,
 But doubts discovery there. Will you grant with me
 That Ferdinand is drown'd ?

Sebastian. He's gone.

Antonio. Then, tell me,
 Who's the next heir of Naples ?

Sebastian. Claribel.

240

Antonio. She that is Queen of Tunis ; she that dwells
 Ten leagues beyond man's life ; she that from Naples
 Can have no note, unless the sun were post,—
 The man i' the moon's too slow,—till new-born chins
 Be rough and razorable ; she from whom
 We all were sea-swallow'd, though some cast again,
 And by that destiny to perform an act
 Whereof what's past is prologue, what to come
 In yours and my discharge.

Sebastian. What stuff is this ! How say you ?
 'T is true, my brother's daughter's Queen of Tunis ;

250

So is she heir of Naples ; 'twixt which regions
There is some space.

Antonio. A space whose every cubit
Seems to cry out, ' How shall that Claribel
Measure us back to Naples ? Keep in Tunis,
And let Sebastian wake.' Say, this were death
'That now hath seiz'd them ; why, they were no worse
'Than now they are. There be that can rule Naples
As well as he that sleeps ; lords that can prate
As amply and unnecessarily
As this Gonzalo : I myself could make
A chough of as deep chat. O, that you bore
The mind that I do ! what a sleep were this
For your advancement ! Do you understand me ?

260

Sebastian. Methinks I do.

Antonio. And how does your content
Tender your own good fortune ?

Sebastian. I remember
You did supplant your brother Prospero.

Antonio. True :
And look how well my garments sit upon me ;
Much feater than before. My brother's servants
Were then my fellows, now they are my men.

Sebastian. But, for your conscience—

270

Antonio. Ay, sir ; where lies that ? If 't were a kibe,
'T would put me to my slipper ; but I feel not
This deity in my bosom. Twenty consciences,
That stand 'twixt me and Milan, candied be they,
And melt, ere they molest ! Here lies your brother,
No better than the earth he lies upon,
If he were that which now he 's like,—that 's dead ;
Whom I, with this obedient steel, three inches of it,
Can lay to bed forever ; whiles you, doing thus,
To the perpetual wink for aye might put
This ancient morsel, this Sir Prudence, who 280

Should not upbraid our course. For all the rest,
 They'll take suggestion as a cat laps milk;
 They'll tell the clock to any business that
 We say befits the hour.

Sebastian. Thy case, dear friend,
 Shall be my precedent; as thou got'st Milan,
 I'll come by Naples. Draw thy sword; one stroke
 Shall free thee from the tribute which thou pay'st,
 And I the king shall love thee.

Antonio. Draw together;
 And when I rear my hand, do you the like,
 To fall it on Gonzalo.

293

Sebastian. O, but one word. [They talk apart.]

Enter ARIEL, with music and song.

Ariel. My master through his art foresees the danger
 That you, his friend, are in, and sends me forth,—
 For else his project dies,—to keep thee living.

[Sings in Gonzalo's ear.]

*While you here do snoring lie,
 Open-eyed conspiracy
 His time doth take.
 If of life you keep a care,
 Shake off slumber, and beware;
 Awake! Awake!*

300

Antonio. Then let us both be sudden.

Gonzalo. [Waking] Now, good angels Preserve the king!—[To Sebastian and Antonio] Why, how now?—[To Alonso] Ho, awake!—
 [To Sebastian and Antonio] Why are you drawn? wherefore this ghastly looking?

Alonso. [Waking] What's the matter?

Sebastian. Whiles we stood here securing your repose,
 Even now, we heard a hollow burst of bellowing

Like bulls, or rather lions; did 't not wake you?
It struck mine ear most terribly.

Alonso. I heard nothing.

Antonio. O, 't was a din to fright a monster's ear,
To make an earthquake; sure, it was the roar 310
Of a whole herd of lions.

Alonso. Heard you this, Gonzalo?

Gonzalo. Upon mine honour, sir, I heard a humming,—
And that a strange one too,—which did awake me.
I shak'd you, sir, and cried; as mine eyes open'd,
I saw their weapons drawn:—there was a noise,
That 's verily. 'T is best we stand upon our guard,
Or that we quit this place; let 's draw our weapons.

Alonso. Lead off this ground; and let 's make further search
For my poor son.

Gonzalo. Heavens keep him from these beasts!
For he is, sure, i' the island.

Alonso. Lead away. 320

Ariel. Prospero my lord shall know what I have done;
So, king, go safely on to seek thy son. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. Another Part of the Island.

Enter CALIBAN, with a burthen of wood. A noise of thunder heard.

Caliban. All the infections that the sun sucks up
From bogs, fens, flats, on Prosper fall, and make him
By inch-meal a disease! His spirits hear me,
And yet I needs must curse. But they 'll nor pinch,
Fright me with urchin-shows, pitch me i' the mire,
Nor lead me, like a firebrand, in the dark
Out of my way, unless he bid 'em: but
For every trifle are they set upon me;
Sometime like apes, that mow and chatter at me,
And after bite me; then like hedgehogs, which

Lie tumbling in my barefoot way, and mount
 Their pricks at my footfall ; sometime am I
 All wound with adders, who with cloven tongues
 Do hiss me into madness.—

Enter TRINCULO.

Lo, now, lo !

Here comes a spirit of his, and to torment me
 For bringing wood in slowly. I'll fall flat ;
 Perchance he will not mind me. 17

Trinculo. Here 's neither bush nor shrub, to bear off any weather at all, and another storm brewing ; I hear it sing i' the wind. Yond same black cloud, yond huge one, looks like a foul bombard that would shed his liquor. If it should thunder as it did before, I know not where to hide my head ; yond same cloud cannot choose but fall by pailfuls.—What have we here ? a man or a fish ? dead or alive ? A fish : he smells like a fish ; a very ancient and fishlike smell ; a kind of, not of the newest, Poor-John. A strange fish ! Were I in England now, as once I was, and had but this fish painted, not a holiday fool there but would give a piece of silver : there would this monster make a man ; any strange beast there makes a man. When they will not give a doit to relieve a lame beggar, they will lay out ten to see a dead Indian. Legged like a man ! and his fins like arms ! Warm o' my troth ! I do now let loose my opinion, hold it no longer ; this is no fish, but an islander, that hath lately suffered by a thunderbolt. [Thunder.] Alas, the storm is come again ! my best way is to creep under his gaberdine ; there is no other shelter hereabout. Misery acquaints a man with strange bed-fellows. I will here shroud till the dregs of the storm be past.

Enter STEPHANO, singing : a bottle in his hand.

Stephano. *I shall no more to sea, to sea,
 Here shall I die ashore,—*

This is a very scurvy tune to sing at a man's funeral. Well, here 's my comfort. [Drinks.]

[Sings] *The master, the swabber, the boatswain, and I,
The gunner, and his mate,
Lov'd Mall, Meg, and Marian, and Margery,
But none of us car'd for Kate;
For she had a tongue with a tang,
Would cry to a sailor, Go hang!
Then, to sea, boys, and let her go hang!*

This is a scurvy tune too ; but here 's my comfort. [Drinks.]

Caliban. Do not torment me!—O! 51

Stephano. What 's the matter? Have we devils here? Do you put tricks upon 's with savages and men of Ind, ha? I have not scaped drowning to be afeard now of your four legs ; for it hath been said, as proper a man as ever went on four legs cannot make him give ground ; and it shall be said so again, while Stephano breathes at nostrils.

Caliban. The spirit torments me!—O! 58

Stephano. This is some monster of the isle with four legs, who hath got, as I take it, an ague. Where the devil should he learn our language? I will give him some relief, if it be but for that. If I can recover him, and keep him tame, and get to Naples with him, he 's a present for any emperor that ever trod on neat's-leather.

Caliban. Do not torment me, prithee ; I 'll bring my wood home faster.

Stephano. He 's in his fit now, and does not talk after the wisest. He shall taste of my bottle ; if he have never drunk wine afore, it will go near to remove his fit. If I can recover him and keep him tame, I will not take too much for him ; he shall pay for him that hath him, and that soundly. 71

Caliban. Thou dost me yet but little hurt ; thou wilt anon, I know it by thy trembling : now Prosper works upon thee.

Stephano. Come on your ways ; open your mouth ; here is that which will give language to you, cat. Open your mouth ; this will shake your shaking, I can tell you, and that soundly : you cannot tell who 's your friend ; open your chaps again.

Trinculo. I should know that voice : it should be—but he is drowned ; and these are devils!—O, defend me ! 80

Stephano. Four legs and two voices ! a most delicate monster ! His forward voice, now, is to speak well of his friend ; his backward voice is to utter foul speeches and to detract. If all the wine in my bottle will recover him, I will help his ague. Come.—Amen ! I will pour some in thy other mouth.

Trinculo. Stephano.

Stephano. Doth thy other mouth call me ? Mercy, mercy ! This is a devil, and no monster : I will leave him ; I have no long spoon.

Trinculo. Stephano ! If thou beest Stephano, touch me, and speak to me ; for I am Trinculo,—be not afeard,—thy good friend Trinculo. 92

Stephano. If thou beest Trinculo, come forth : I 'll pull thee by the lesser legs ; if any be Trinculo's legs, these are they. Thou art very Trinculo indeed ! How camest thou to be the siege of this moon-calf ? Can he vent Trinculos ?

Trinculo. I took him to be killed with a thunder-stroke.—But art thou not drowned, Stephano ? I hope, now, thou art not drowned. Is the storm overblown ? I hid me under the dead moon-calf's gaberdine for fear of the storm. And art thou living, Stephano ? O Stephano, two Neapolitans escaped ? 102

Stephano. Prithee, do not turn me about ; my stomach is not constant.

Caliban. These be fine things, an if they be not sprites. That 's a brave god, and bears celestial liquor ; I will kneel to him.

Stephano. How didst thou scape ? How camest thou hither ? swear, by this bottle, how thou camest hither. I escaped upon a butt of sack, which the sailors heaved o'erboard, by this bottle!—which I made of the bark of a tree with mine own hands, since I was cast ashore. 112

Caliban. I'll swear, upon that bottle, to be thy true subject ;
For the liquor is not earthly.

Stephano. Here ; swear, then, how thou escapedst.

Trinculo. Swam ashore, man, like a duck ; I can swim like a duck, I'll be sworn.

Stephano. Here, kiss the book. 'Though thou canst swim like a duck, thou art made like a goose.

Trinculo. O Stephano, hast any more of this? 120

Stephano. The whole butt, man ; my cellar is in a rock by the sea-side, where my wine is hid.—How now, moon-calf ! how does thine ague?

Caliban. Hast thou not dropped from heaven?

Stephano. Out o' the moon, I do assure thee ; I was the man i' the moon when time was.

Caliban. I have seen thee in her, and I do adore thee ;
My mistress show'd me thee, and thy dog, and thy bush.

Stephano. Come, swear to that ; kiss the book : I will furnish it anon with new contents ; swear. 130

Trinculo. By this good light, this is a very shallow monster !
—I afeard of him !—A very weak monster !—The man i' the moon !—A most poor credulous monster !—Well drawn, monster, in good sooth !

Caliban. I'll show thee every fertile inch o' the island ;
And I will kiss thy foot. I prithee, be my god.

Trinculo. By this light, a most perfidious and drunken monster !
When 's god 's asleep, he'll rob his bottle.

Caliban. I'll kiss thy foot ; I'll swear myself thy subject.

Stephano. Come on, then ; down, and swear. 140

Trinculo. I shall laugh myself to death at this puppy-headed monster. A most scurvy monster ! I could find in my heart to beat him,— Stephano. Come, kiss.

Trinculo. But that the poor monster's in drink. An abominable monster!

Caliban. I'll show thee the best springs; I'll pluck thee berries;
I'll fish for thee, and get thee wood enough.
A plague upon the tyrant that I serve!
I'll bear him no more sticks, but follow thee, 150
Thou wondrous man.

Trinculo. A most ridiculous monster, to make a wonder of a poor drunkard!

Caliban. I prithee, let me bring thee where crabs grow;
And I with my long nails will dig thee pig-nuts,
Show thee a jay's nest, and instruct thee how
To snare the nimble marmoset. I'll bring thee
To clustering filberts; and sometimes I'll get thee
Young scamels from the rock. Wilt thou go with me?

Stephano. I prithee now, lead the way without any more talking.—Trinculo, the king and all our company else being drowned, we will inherit here.—Here, bear my bottle.—Fellow Trinculo, we'll fill him by and by again. 163

Caliban. [Sings drunkenly] Farewell, master; farewell, farewell!

Trinculo. A howling monster; a drunken monster!

Caliban. No more dams I'll make for fish;

Nor fetch in firing

At requiring;

Nor scrape trenchering, nor wash dish:

'Ban, 'Ban, Ca-caliban 170

Has a new-master:—get a new man.

Freedom, hey-day! hey-day, freedom! freedom, hey-day, freedom!

Stephano. O brave monster! Lead the way. [Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I. Before Prospero's Cell.

Enter FERDINAND, bearing a log.

Ferdinand. There be some sports are painful, and their labour

Delight in them sets off ; some kinds of baseness
Are nobly undergone, and most poor matters

Point to rich ends. This my mean task
Would be as heavy to me as odious, but
The mistress which I serve quickens what 's dead,
And makes my labours pleasures. O, she is
Ten times more gentle than her father 's crabbed,
And he 's compos'd of harshness! I must remove
Some thousands of these logs, and pile them up,
Upon a sore injunction. My sweet mistress
Weeps when she sees me work, and says such baseness
Had never like executor. I forget ;
But these sweet thoughts do even refresh my labours,
Most busy, least when I do it.

10

Enter MIRANDA, and PROSPERO at a distance.

Miranda. Alas ! now, pray you,
Work not so hard ; I would the lightning had
Burnt up those logs that you are enjoin'd to pile !
Pray, set it down, and rest you ; when this burns,
'T will weep for having wearied you. My father
Is hard at study ; pray, now, rest yourself ;
He 's safe for these three hours.

20

Ferdinand. O most dear mistress,
The sun will set before I shall discharge
What I must strive to do.

Miranda. If you 'll sit down,
I 'll bear your logs the while. Pray, give me that ;
I 'll carry it to the pile.

Ferdinand. No, precious creature ;
I had rather crack my sinews, break my back,
Than you should such dishonour undergo,
While I sit lazy by.

Miranda. It would become me
As well as it does you ; and I should do it
With much more ease, for my good will is to it,
And yours it is against.

30

Prospero. Poor worm, thou art infected !
This visitation shows it.

Miranda. You look wearily.

Ferdinand. No, noble mistress ; 't is fresh morning with me
When you are by at night. I do beseech you,— Chiefly that I might set it in my prayers,—
What is your name?

Miranda. Miranda.—O my father,
I have broken your hest to say so !

Ferdinand. Admir'd Miranda !

Indeed the top of admiration, worth
What's dearest to the world ! Full many a lady
I have eyed with best regard, and many a time
The harmony of their tongues hath into bondage
Brought my too diligent ear. For several virtues
Have I lik'd several women, never any
With so full soul but some defect in her
Did quarrel with the noblest grace she owed,
And put it to the foil ; but you, O you,
So perfect and so peerless, are created
Of every creature's best !

Miranda. I do not know
One of my sex, no woman's face remember,
Save, from my glass, mine own ; nor have I seen
More that I may call men than you, good friend,
And my dear father. How features are abroad,
I am skillless of ; but, by my modesty,
The jewel in my dower, I would not wish
Any companion in the world but you ;
Nor can imagination form a shape,
Besides yourself, to like of.—But I prattle
Something too wildly, and my father's precepts
I therein do forget.

Ferdinand. I am, in my condition,
A prince, Miranda ; I do think, a king ;—

I would, not so!—and would no more endure
 This wooden slavery than to suffer
 The flesh-fly blow my mouth. Hear my soul speak:
 The very instant that I saw you, did
 My heart fly to your service; there resides,
 To make me slave to it; and for your sake
 Am I this patient log-man.

Miranda. Do you love me?

Ferdinand. O heaven! O earth! bear witness to this sound,

And crown what I profess with kind event,
 If I speak true; if hollowly, invert 70
 What best is boded me to mischief! I,
 Beyond all limit of what else i' the world,
 Do love, prize, honour you.

Miranda. I am a fool
 To weep at what I am glad of.

Prospero. Fair encounter
 Of two most rare affections! Heavens rain grace
 On that which breeds between 'em!

Ferdinand. Wherefore weep you?

Miranda. At mine unworthiness, that dare not offer
 What I desire to give, and much less take
 What I shall die to want. But this is trifling;
 And all the more it seeks to hide itself, 80
 The bigger bulk it shows. Hence, bashful cunning!
 And prompt me, plain and holy innocence!
 I am your wife, if you will marry me;
 If not, I'll die your maid: to be your fellow
 You may deny me, but I'll be your servant,
 Whether you will or no.

Ferdinand. My mistress, dearest,
 And I thus humble ever.

Miranda. My husband, then?

Ferdinand. Ay, with a heart as willing
 As bondage e'er of freedom; here 's my hand.

Miranda. And mine, with my heart in 't ; and now farewell
Till half an hour hence.

Ferdinand.

A thousand thousand !

91

[Exeunt Ferdinand and Miranda.]

Prospero. So glad of this as they I cannot be,
Who are surpris'd with all ; but my rejoicing
At nothing can be more. I 'll to my book,
For yet ere supper-time must I perform
Much business appertaining.

[Exit.]

SCENE II. Another Part of the Island.

Enter CALIBAN, STEPHANO, and TRINCULO.

Stephano. Tell not me :—when the butt is out, we will drink water ; not a drop before : therefore bear up, and board 'em.—Servant-monster, drink to me.

Trinculo. Servant-monster ! the folly of this island ! They say there 's but five upon this isle : we are three of them ; if th' other two be brained like us, the State totters.

Stephano. Drink, servant-monster, when I bid thee ; thy eyes are almost set in thy head.

Trinculo. Where should they be set else ? he were a brave monster indeed, if they were set in his tail.

10

Stephano. My man-monster hath drowned his tongue in sack :
for my part, the sea cannot drown me ; I swam, ere I could recover the shore, five-and-thirty leagues off and on, by this light !—Thou shalt be my lieutenant, monster, or my standard.

Trinculo. Your lieutenant, if you list ; he 's no standard.

Stephano. We 'll not run, Monsieur Monster.

Trinculo. Nor go neither ; but you 'll lie, like dogs, and yet say nothing neither.

Stephano. Moon-calf, speak once in thy life, if thou beest a good moon-calf.

20

Caliban. How does thy honour ? Let me lick thy shoe.
I 'll not serve him, he is not valiant.

Trinculo. Thou liest, most ignorant monster ; I am in case to justle a constable. Why, thou deboshed fish, thou, was there ever man a coward that hath drunk so much sack as I to-day? Wilt thou tell a monstrous lie, being but half a fish and half a monster?

Caliban. Lo, how he mocks me ! wilt thou let him, my lord?

Trinculo. Lord, quoth he !—That a monster should be such a natural ! 30

Caliban. Lo, lo, again ! bite him to death, I prithee.

Stephano. Trinculo, keep a good tongue in your head ; if you prove a mutineer,—the next tree ! The poor monster 's my subject, and he shall not suffer indignity.

Caliban. I thank my noble lord. Wilt thou be pleas'd To hearken once again to the suit I made to thee?

Stephano. Marry, will I : kneel and repeat it ; I will stand, and so shall Trinculo.

Enter ARIEL, invisible.

Caliban. As I told thee before, I am subject to a tyrant, A sorcerer, that by his cunning hath cheated me 40
Of the island.

Ariel. Thou liest.

Caliban. Thou liest, thou jesting monkey, thou ;
I would my valiant master would destroy thee !
I do not lie.

Stephano. Trinculo, if you trouble him any more in 's tale, by this hand, I will supplant some of your teeth.

Trinculo. Why, I said nothing.

Stephano. Mum, then, and no more.—Proceed.

Caliban. I say, by sorcery he got this isle ;
From me he got it. If thy greatness will, 50
Revenge it on him, for I know thou dar'st,
But this thing dare not.

Stephano. That 's most certain.

Caliban. Thou shalt be lord of it, and I 'll serve thee.

Stephano. How now shall this be compass'd? Canst thou bring me to the party?

Caliban. Yea, yea, my lord; I'll yield him thee asleep, Where thou mayst knock a nail into his head.

Ariel. Thou liest; thou canst not.

Caliban. What a pied ninny's this! 'Thou scurvy patch!— I do beseech thy greatness, give him blows, 61
And take his bottle from him: when that's gone,
He shall drink nought but brine; for I'll not show him
Where the quick freshes are.

Stephano. Trinculo, run into no further danger; interrupt the monster one word further, and, by this hand, I'll turn my mercy out o' doors, and make a stock-fish of thee.

Trinculo. Why, what did I? I did nothing. I'll go farther off.

Stephano. Didst thou not say he lied? 70

Ariel. Thou liest.

Stephano. Do I so? take thou that. [Beats him] As you like this, give me the lie another time.

Trinculo. I did not give the lie. Out o' your wits, and hearing too?—A pox o' your bottle! this can sack and drinking do.—A murrain on your monster, and the devil take your fingers!

Caliban. Ha, ha, ha!

Stephano. Now, forward with your tale.—Prithee, stand farther off. 85

Caliban. Beat him enough; after a little time, I'll beat him too.

Stephano. Stand farther.—Come, proceed.

Caliban. Why, as I told thee, 't is a custom with him I' the afternoon to sleep; there thou mayst brain him, Having first seiz'd his books, or with a log
Batter his skull, or paunch him with a stake,
Or cut his wezand with thy knife. Remember
First to possess his books, for without them

He 's but a sot, as I am, nor hath not
 One spirit to command ; they all do hate him
 As rootedly as I. Burn but his books.
 He has brave utensils,—for so he calls them,—
 Which, when he has a house, he 'll deck withal.
 And that most deeply to consider is
 The beauty of his daughter. He himself
 Calls her a nonpareil : I never saw a woman,
 But only Sycorax my dam and she ;
 But she as far surpasseth Sycorax
 As great'st does least.

Stephano. Is it so brave a lass?

Caliban. Ay, lord ; she will become thy bed, I warrant,
 And bring thee forth brave brood.

Stephano. Monster, I will kill this man ; his daughter and I will be king and queen,—save our graces!—and Trinculo and thyself shall be viceroys. Dost thou like the plot, Trin-culo?

Trinculo. Excellent.

Stephano. Give me thy hand : I am sorry I beat thee ; but, while thou livest, keep a good tongue in thy head.

Caliban. Within this half hour will he be asleep ;
 Wilt thou destroy him then ?

Stephano. Ay, on mine honour.

Ariel. This will I tell my master.

Caliban. Thou mak'st me merry ; I am full of pleasure.
 Let us be jocund ; will you troll the catch
 You taught me but while-ere ?

Stephano. At thy request, monster, I will do reason, any reason.—Come on, Trinculo, let us sing.

*Flout 'em and scout 'em, and scout 'em and flout 'em ;
 Thought is free.*

Caliban. That 's not the tune.

[Ariel plays the tune on a tabor and pipe.]

Stephano. What is this same? 120

Trinculo. This is the tune of our catch, played by the picture of Nobody.

Stephano. If thou beest a man, show thyself in thy likeness; if thou beest a devil, take 't as thou list.

Trinculo. O, forgive me my sins!

Stephano. He that dies pays all debts; I defy thee.—Mercy upon us!

Caliban. Art thou afeard?

Stephano. No, monster, not I.

Caliban. Be not afeard; the isle is full of noises, 130
Sounds and sweet airs, that give delight and hurt not.
Sometimes a thousand twangling instruments
Will hum about mine ears; and sometimes voices,
That, if I then had wak'd after long sleep,
Will make me sleep again: and then, in dreaming,
The clouds methought would open, and show riches
Ready to drop upon me; that, when I wak'd,
I cried to dream again.

Stephano. This will prove a brave kingdom to me, where I shall have my music for nothing. 140

Caliban. When Prospero is destroy'd.

Stephano. That shall be by and by; I remember the story.

Trinculo. The sound is going away; let's follow it, and after do our work.

Stephano. Lead, monster; we'll follow.—I would I could see this taborer; he lays it on.

Trinculo. Wilt come? I'll follow, Stephano. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Another Part of the Island.

Enter ALONSO, SEBASTIAN, ANTONIO, GONZALO, ADRIAN,
FRANCISCO, and others.

Gonzalo. By 'r lakin, I can go no further, sir;
My old bones ache: here 's a maze trod, indeed,

Through forthrights and meanders ! By your patience,
I needs must rest me.

Alonso. Old lord, I cannot blame thee,
Who am myself attach'd with weariness,
To the dulling of my spirits ; sit down, and rest.
Even here I will put off my hope, and keep it
No longer for my flatterer ; he is drown'd
Whom thus we stray to find, and the sea mocks
Our frustrate search on land. Well, let him go. 10

Antonio. [Aside to Sebastian] I am right glad that he 's so out of hope.
Do not, for one repulse, forego the purpose
That you resolv'd to effect.

Sebastian. [Aside to Antonio] The next advantage
Will we take throughly.

Antonio. [Aside to Sebastian] Let it be to-night ;
For, now they are oppress'd with travel, they
Will not, nor cannot, use such vigilance
As when they are fresh.

Sebastian. [Aside to Antonio] I say, to-night ; no more.
[Solemn and strange music.]

Alonso. What harmony is this ?—My good friends, hark !

Gonzalo. Marvellous sweet music !

Enter PROSPERO above, invisible. Enter several strange Shapes, bringing in a banquet : they dance about it with gentle actions of salutation ; and, inviting the King, etc. to eat, they depart.

Alonso. Give us kind keepers, heavens !—What were these ?

Sebastian. A living drollery. Now I will believe 20
That there are unicorns ; that in Arabia
There is one tree, the phœnix' throne, one phœnix
At this hour reigning there.

Antonio. I 'll believe both ;
And what does else want credit, come to me,
And I 'll be sworn 't is true ; travellers ne'er did lie,
Though fools at home condemn 'em.

Gonzalo.

If in Naples

I should report this now, would they believe me?

If I should say I saw such islanders,—

For, certes, these are people of the island,—

30

Who, though they are of monstrous shape, yet, note,

Their manners are more gentle-kind than of

Our human generation you shall find

Many, nay, almost any.

Prospero. [Aside]

Honest lord,

Thou hast said well ; for some of you there present

Are worse than devils.

Alonso.

I cannot too much muse

Such shapes, such gesture, and such sound, expressing—

Although they want the use of tongue—a kind

Of excellent dumb discourse.

Prospero. [Aside]

Praise in departing.

Francisco. They vanish'd strangely.Sebastian.

No matter, since 40

They have left their viands behind ; for we have stomachs.—

Will 't please you taste of what is here?

Alonso.

Not I.

Gonzalo. Faith, sir, you need not fear. When we were boys,

Who would believe that there were mountaineers

Dew-lapp'd like bulls, whose throats had hanging at 'em

Wallets of flesh? or that there were such men

Whose heads stood in their breasts? which now we find

Each putter-out of five for one will bring us

Good warrant of.

Alonso.

I will stand to and feed,

Although my last ; no matter, since I feel 50

The best is past.—Brother, my lord the duke,

Stand to, and do as we.

Thunder and lightning. Enter ARIEL, like a harpy, claps his wings upon the table, and with a quaint device the banquet vanishes.

Ariel. You are three men of sin, whom destiny,—
 That hath to instrument this lower world
 And what is in 't,—the never-surfeited sea
 Hath caus'd to belch up you ; and on this island,
 Where man doth not inhabit,—you 'mongst men
 Being most unfit to live. I have made you mad ;
 And even with such-like valour men hang and drown
 Their proper selves. [Alonso, Sebastian, etc., draw their swords.

60

70

80

80

You fools ! I and my fellows
 Are ministers of Fate ; the elements,
 Of whom your swords are temper'd, may as well
 Wound the loud winds, or with bemock'd-at stabs
 Kill the still-closing waters, as diminish
 One dowe that 's in my plume. My fellow-ministers
 Are like invulnerable. If you could hurt,
 Your swords are now too massy for your strengths,
 And will not be uplifted. But remember,—
 For that 's my business to you,—that you three,
 From Milan did supplant good Prospero,
 Expos'd unto the sea, which hath requit it,
 Him and his innocent child ; for which foul deed
 The powers, delaying, not forgetting, have Incens'd the seas and shores, yea, all the creatures,
 Against your peace. Thee of thy son, Alonso,
 They have bereft, and do pronounce by me,
 Lingering perdition—worse than any death
 Can be at once—shall step by step attend
 You and your ways ; whose wraths to guard you from,—
 Which here, in this most desolate isle, else falls
 Upon your heads,—is nothing but heart's sorrow,
 And a clear life ensuing.

He vanishes in thunder ; then, to soft music, enter the Shapes again, and dance with mocks and mows, and carry out the table.

Prospero. [Aside] Bravely the figure of this harpy hast thou Perform'd, my Ariel ; a grace it had, devouring.
Of my instruction hast thou nothing bated
In what thou hadst to say ; so, with good life
And observation strange, my meaner ministers
Their several kinds have done. My high charms work,
And these mine enemies are all knit up
In their distractions : they now are in my power ;
And in these fits I leave them, while I visit
Young Ferdinand,—whom they suppose is drown'd,—
And his and mine lov'd darling. [Exit above.]

Gonzalo. I' the name of something holy, sir, why stand you
In this strange stare?

Alonso. O, it is monstrous, monstrous !
Methought the billows spoke, and told me of it ;
The winds did sing it to me, and the thunder,
That deep and dreadful organ-pipe, pronounc'd
The name of Prosper: it did bass my trespass.
Therefore my son i' the ooze is bedded ; and
I'll seek him deeper than e'er plummet sounded,
And with him there lie mudded.

[Exit.

Sebastian. But one fiend at a time,
I'll fight their legions o'er.

Antonio. I'll be thy second.

[Exeunt Sebastian and Antonio.

Gonzalo. All three of them are desperate ; their great guilt,
Like poison given to work a great time after,
Now gins to bite the spirits.—I do beseech you
That are of suppler joints, follow them swiftly,
And hinder them from what this ecstasy
May now provoke them to.

Adrian. Follow, I pray you. [Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I. Before Prospero's Cell.

Enter PROSPERO, FERDINAND, and MIRANDA.

Prospero. If I have too austere punish'd you,
Your compensation makes amends, for I
Have given you here a thread of mine own life,

Or that for which I live ; who once again
 I tender to thy hand. All thy vexations
 Were but my trials of thy love, and thou
 Hast strangely stood the test ; here, afore heaven,
 I ratify this my rich gift. O Ferdinand,
 Do not smile at me that I boast her off,
 For thou shalt find she will outstrip all praise,
 And make it halt behind her. 10

Ferdinand. I do believe it Against an oracle.

Prospero. Then, as my gift and thine own acquisition Worthily purchas'd, take my daughter : but
 If thou dost break her virgin-knot before
 All sanctimonious ceremonies may
 With full and holy rite be minister'd,
 No sweet aspersion shall the heavens let fall
 To make this contract grow ; but barren hate,
 Sour-eyed disdain, and discord shall bestrew 20
 The union of your bed with weeds so loathly
 That you shall hate it both : therefore, take heed,
 As Hymen's lamps shall light you.

Ferdinand. As I hope
 For quiet days, fair issue, and long life,
 With such love as 't is now, the murkiest den,
 The most opportune place, the strong'st suggestion
 Our worser genius can, shall never melt
 Mine honour into lust, to take away
 The edge of that day's celebration
 When I shall think, or Phœbus' steeds are founde'r'd, 30
 Or night kept chain'd below.

Prospero. Fairly spoke.
 Sit then and talk with her ; she is thine own.—
 What, Ariel ! my industrious servant, Ariel !

Enter ARIEL.

Ariel. What would my potent master? here I am.

Prospero. Thou and thy meaner fellows your last service
Did worthily perform, and I must use you
In such another trick. Go bring the rabble,
O'er whom I give thee power, here to this place.
Incite them to quick motion, for I must Bestow upon the eyes of this young couple
Some vanity of mine art; it is my promise,
And they expect it from me.

40

Ariel. Presently?

Prospero. Ay, with a twink.

Ariel. Before you can say 'come' and 'go,'
And breathe twice, and cry 'so, so,'
Each one, tripping on his toe,
Will be here with mop and mow.—
Do you love me, master? no?

Prospero. Dearly, my delicate Ariel. Do not approach
Till thou dost hear me call.

Ariel. Well, I conceive. [Exit.

Prospero. Look thou be true; do not give dalliance
Too much the rein: the strongest oaths are straw
To the fire i' the blood; be more abstemious,
Or else good night your vow!

Ferdinand. I warrant you, sir;
The white-cold virgin snow upon my heart
Abates the ardour of my liver.

Prospero. Well.—
Now come, my Ariel! bring a corollary,
Rather than want a spirit; appear, and pertly!—
No tongue! all eyes! be silent. [Soft music.

Enter IRIS.

Iris. Ceres, most bounteous lady, thy rich leas

60

Of wheat, rye, barley, vetches, oats, and pease ;
 Thy turfy mountains, where live nibbling sheep,
 And flat meads thatch'd with stover, them to keep ;
 Thy banks with pioned and liliated brims,
 Which spongy April at thy hest betrimms,
 To make cold nymphs chaste crowns ; and thy broom groves,
 Whose shadow the dismissed bachelor loves,
 Being lass-lorn ; thy pole-clipt vineyard ;
 And thy sea-marge, sterile and rocky-hard,
 Where thou thyself dost air ;—the queen o' the sky, 70
 Whose watery arch and messenger am I,
 Bids thee leave these, and with her sovereign grace,
 Here on this grass-plot, in this very place,
 To come and sport. Her peacocks fly amain ;
 Approach, rich Ceres, her to entertain.

Enter CERES.

Ceres. Hail, many-colour'd messenger, that ne'er
 Dost disobey the wife of Jupiter ;
 Who, with thy saffron wings, upon my flowers
 Diffusest honey-drops, refreshing showers,
 And with each end of thy blue bow dost crown 80
 My bosky acres and my unshrubbed down,
 Rich scarf to my proud earth ! Why hath thy queen
 Summon'd me hither, to this short-grass'd green ?

Iris. A contract of true love to celebrate,
 And some donation freely to estate
 On the blest lovers.

Ceres. Tell me, heavenly bow,
 If Venus or her son, as thou dost know,
 Do now attend the queen ? Since they did plot
 The means that dusky Dis my daughter got,
 Her and her blind boy's scandal'd company 90
 I have forsworn.

Iris. Of her society

Be not afraid ; I met her deity
Cutting the clouds towards Paphos, and her son
Dove-drawn with her. Here thought they to have done
Some wanton charm upon this man and maid,
Whose vows are, that no bed-right shall be paid
Till Hymen's torch be lighted : but in vain ;
Mars's hot minion is return'd again ;
Her waspish-headed son has broke his arrows,
Swears he will shoot no more, but play with sparrows,
And be a boy right out.

Ceres. Highest queen of state,
Great Juno comes; I know her by her gait.

Enter JUNO.

Junio. How does my bounteous sister? Go with me
To bless this twain, that they may prosperous be,
And honour'd in their issue. [They sing.]

Juno. *Honour, riches, marriage-blessing,
Long continuance, and increasing,
Hourly joys be still upon you !
Juno sings her blessings on you.*

Ceres. *Earth's increase, foison plenty,
Barns and garner's never empty,
Vines with clustering bunches growing,
Plants with goodly burthen bowing;
Spring come to you at the farthest
In the very end of harvest!
Scarcity and want shall shun you;
Ceres' blessing so is on you.*

Ferdinand. This is a most majestic vision, and Harmonious charmingly. May I be bold
To think these spirits?

Prospero. Spirits, which by mine art
I have from their confines call'd to enact
My present fancies.

Ferdinand. Let me live here ever ;
 So rare a wonder'd father and a wise
 Makes this place Paradise.

[Juno and Ceres whisper, and send Iris on employment.]

Prospero. Sweet now, silence !
Juno and Ceres whisper seriously ;
 There's something else to do : hush, and be mute,
 Or else our spell is marr'd.

Iris. You nymphs, call'd Naiads, of the winding brooks,
 With your sedge'd crowns and ever harmless looks,
 Leave your crisp channels, and on this green land 130
 Answer your summons ; Juno does command.
 Come, temperate nymphs, and help to celebrate
 A contract of true love ; be not too late.—

Enter certain Nymphs.

You sunburnt sicklemen, of August weary,
 Come hither from the furrow, and be merry.
 Make holiday ; your rye-straw hats put on,
 And these fresh nymphs encounter every one
 In country footing.

Enter certain Reapers, properly habited: they join with the Nymphs in a graceful dance ; towards the end whereof PROSPERO starts suddenly, and speaks ; after which, to a strange, hollow, and confused noise, they heavily vanish.

Prospero. [Aside] I had forgot that foul conspiracy
 Of the beast Caliban and his confederates 140
 Against my life ; the minute of their plot
 Is almost come.—[To the Spirits] Well done ! Avoid ; no more !

Ferdinand. This is strange ; your father's in some passion
 That works him strongly.

Miranda. Never till this day
 Saw I him touch'd with anger so distemper'd.

Prospero. You do look, my son, in a mov'd sort,
 As if you were dismay'd ; be cheerful, sir.
 Our revels now are ended. These our actors,
 As I foretold you, were all spirits, and
 Are melted into air, into thin air ;
 And, like the baseless fabric of this vision,
 The cloud-capp'd towers, the gorgeous palaces,
 The solemn temples, the great globe itself,
 Yea, all which it inherit, shall dissolve,
 And, like this insubstantial pageant faded,
 Leave not a rack behind. We are such stuff
 As dreams are made on, and our little life
 Is rounded with a sleep.—Sir, I am vex'd ;
 Bear with my weakness ; my old brain is troubled.
 Be not disturb'd with my infirmity:
 If you be pleas'd, retire into my cell
 And there repose ; a turn or two I'll walk,
 To still my beating mind.

150

160

Ferdinand. Miranda. We wish your peace. [Exeunt.]

Prospero. Come with a thought. I thank thee, Ariel: come!

Enter ARIEL.

Ariel. Thy thoughts I cleave to. What's thy pleasure?

Prospero. Spirit,
 We must prepare to meet with Caliban.

Ariel. Ay, my commander ; when I presented Ceres,
 I thought to have told thee of it, but I fear'd
 Lest I might anger thee.

169

Prospero. Say again, where didst thou leave these varlets?

Ariel. I told you, sir, they were red-hot with drinking ;
 So full of valour that they smote the air
 For breathing in their faces, beat the ground
 For kissing of their feet, yet always bending
 Towards their project. Then I beat my tabor,
 At which, like unback'd colts, they prick'd their ears,

Advanc'd their eyelids, lifted up their noses
 As they smelt music ; so I charm'd their ears
 That, calf-like, they my lowing follow'd through Tooth'd briers, sharp furzes, pricking gorse, and thorns, 180
 Which enter'd their frail shins : at last I left them
 I' the filthy mantled pool beyond your cell,
 There dancing up to the chins, that the foul lake
 O'erstunk their feet.

Prospero. This was well done, my bird.
 Thy shape invisible retain thou still ;
 The trumpery in my house, go bring it hither,
 For stale to catch these thieves.

Ariel. I go, I go. [Exit.

Prospero. A devil, a born devil, on whose nature
 Nuture can never stick ; on whom my pains,
 Humanely taken, all, all lost, quite lost ; 190
 And as with age his body uglier grows,
 So his mind cankers. I will plague them all,
 Even to roaring.—

Enter ARIEL, loaden with glistering apparel, etc.

Come hang them on this line.

PROSPERO and ARIEL remain invisible. Enter CALIBAN, STEPHANO, and TRINCULO, all wet.

Caliban. Pray you, tread softly, that the blind mole may not
 Hear a foot fall ; we now are near his cell.

Stephano. Monster, your fairy, which you say is a harmless fairy, has done little better than played the Jack with us.—
 Do you hear, monster ? If I should take a displeasure against you, look you,—

Trinculo. Thou wert but a lost monster. 200

Caliban. Good my lord, give me thy favour still.
 Be patient, for the prize I 'll bring thee to

Shall hoodwink this mischance ; therefore speak softly.
All 's hush'd as midnight yet.

Trinculo. Ay, but to lose our bottles in the pool,—

Stephano. There is not only disgrace and dishonour in that, monster, but an infinite loss.

Trinculo. That 's more to me than my wetting ; yet this is your harmless fairy, monster.

Stephano. I will fetch off my bottle, though I be o'er ears for my labour. 211

Caliban. Prithee, my king, be quiet. Seest thou here, This is the mouth o' the cell ; no noise, and enter. Do that good mischief which may make this island Thine own for ever, and I, thy Caliban, For aye thy foot-licker.

Stephano. Give me thy hand. I do begin to have bloody thoughts.

Trinculo. O King Stephano ! O peer ! O worthy Stephano ! look what a wardrobe here is for thee ! 220

Caliban. Let it alone, thou fool ; it is but trash.

Trinculo. O, ho, monster ! we know what belongs to a frippery.—O King Stephano !

Stephano. Put off that gown, Trinculo ; by this hand, I 'll have that gown.

Trinculo. Thy grace shall have it.

Caliban. The dropsy drown this fool ! What do you mean, To dote thus on such luggage ? Let 's alone, And do the murder first ; if he awake, From toe to crown he 'll fill our skins with pinches, 230
Make us strange stuff.

Stephano. Be you quiet, monster.—Mistress line, is not this my jerkin ? Now is the jerkin under the line ; now, jerkin, you are like to lose your hair, and prove a bald jerkin.

Trinculo. Do, do ; we steal by line and level, an 't like your grace.

Stephano. I thank thee for that jest ; here 's a garment for 't :

wit shall not go unrewarded while I am king of this country.
 'Steal by line and level' is an excellent pass of pate; there 's another garment for 't. 240

Trinculo. Monster, come, put some lime upon your fingers, and away with the rest.

Caliban. I will have none on 't; we shall lose our time,
 And all be turn'd to barnacles, or to apes
 With foreheads villanous low.

Stephano. Monster, lay to your fingers; help to bear this away where my hogshead of wine is, or I 'll turn you out of my kingdom: go to, carry this.

Trinculo. And this.

Stephano. Ay, and this. 250

A noise of hunters heard. Enter divers Spirits, in shape of dogs and hounds, and hunt them about, PROSPERO and ARIEL setting them on.

Prospero. Hey, Mountain, hey!

Ariel. Silver! there it goes, Silver!

Prospero. Fury, Fury! there, Tyrant, there! hark, hark!—

[Caliban, Stephano, and Trinculo are driven out.]

Go charge my goblins that they grind their joints
 With dry convulsions, shorten up their sinews
 With aged cramps, and more pinch-spotted make them
 Than pard or cat o' mountain.

Ariel. Hark, they roar!

Prospero. Let them be hunted soundly. At this hour
 Lies at my mercy all mine enemies;
 Shortly shall all my labours end, and thou Shalt have the air at freedom. For a little Follow, and do me service. 260

[Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I. Before the Cell of Prospero.

Enter PROSPERO in his magic robes, and ARIEL.

Prospero. Now does my project gather to a head ;
My charms crack not, my spirits obey, and Time
Goes upright with his carriage. How 's the day?

Ariel. On the sixth hour ; at which time, my lord,
You said our work should cease.

Prospero. I did say so,
When first I rais'd the tempest. Say, my spirit,
How fares the king and 's followers?

Ariel. Confin'd together
In the same fashion as you gave in charge,
Just as you left them ; all prisoners, sir,
In the line-grove which weather-fends your cell : 10
They cannot budge till your release. The king,
His brother, and yours, abide all three distracted,
And the remainder mourning over them,
Brimful of sorrow and dismay ; but chiefly
Him that you term'd, sir, the good old lord, Gonzalo :
His tears run down his beard, like winter's drops
From eaves of reeds. Your charm so strongly works 'em
'That if you now beheld them, your affections
Would become tender.

Prospero. Dost thou think so, spirit?

Ariel. Mine would, sir, were I human.

Prospero. And mine shall.
Hast thou, which art but air, a touch, a feeling 21
Of their afflictions, and shall not myself,
One of their kind, that relish all as sharply
Passion as they, be kindlier mov'd than thou art?
Though with their high wrongs I am struck to the quick,
Yet with my nobler reason 'gainst my fury
Do I take part. The rarer action is
In virtue than in vengeance ; they being penitent,
The sole drift of my purpose doth extend
Not a frown further. Go release them, Ariel ; 30
My charms I 'll break, their senses I 'll restore,
And they shall be themselves.

Ariel. I 'll fetch them, sir. [Exit.

Prospero. Ye elves of hills, brooks, standing lakes, and groves,

And ye that on the sands with printless foot
 Do chase the ebbing Neptune, and do fly him
 When he comes back ; you demi-puppets that
 By moonshine do the green sour ringlets make,
 Whereof the ewe not bites ; and you whose pastime
 Is to make midnight mushrooms, that rejoice
 To hear the solemn curfew ; by whose aid—
 Weak masters though ye be—I have bedimm'd
 The noontide sun, call'd forth the mutinous winds,
 And 'twixt the green sea and the azur'd vault
 Set roaring war : to the dread rattling thunder
 Have I given fire, and rifted Jove's stout oak
 With his own bolt ; the strong-bas'd promontory
 Have I made shake, and by the spurs pluck'd up
 The pine and cedar ; graves at my command
 Have wak'd their sleepers, op'd, and let 'em forth
 By my so potent art. But this rough magic
 I here abjure ; and, when I have requir'd
 Some heavenly music—which even now I do,—
 To work mine end upon their senses that
 This airy charm is for, I 'll break my staff,
 Bury it certain fathoms in the earth,
 And deeper than did ever plummet sound
 I 'll drown my book. [Solemn music.

*Here enter ARIEL before : then ALONSO, with a frantic gesture, attended by GONZALO ; SEBASTIAN and ANTONIO in like manner, attended by ADRIAN and FRANCISCO : they all enter the circle which PROSPERO had made, and there stand charmed ;
 which PROSPERO observing, speaks :*

A solemn air, and the best comforter
 To an unsettled fancy, cure thy brains,
 Now useless, boil'd within thy skull ! There stand,
 For you are spell-stopp'd.—
 Holy Gonzalo, honourable man,

Mine eyes, even sociable to the show of thine,
 Fall fellowly drops.—The charm dissolves apace ;
 And as the morning steals upon the night,
 Melting the darkness, so their rising senses
 Begin to chase the ignorant fumes that mantle
 Their clearer reason.—O good Gonzalo,
 My true preserver, and a loyal sir
 To him thou follow'st ! I will pay thy graces 70
 Home both in word and deed.—Most cruelly
 Didst thou, Alonso, use me and my daughter ;
 Thy brother was a furtherer in the act.—
 Thou art pinch'd for 't now, Sebastian.—Flesh and blood,
 You, brother mine, that entertain'd ambition,
 Expell'd remorse and nature ; who, with Sebastian,— Whose inward pinches therefore are most strong,—
 Would here have kill'd your king ; I do forgive thee,
 Unnatural though thou art.—Their understanding 80
 Begins to swell, and the approaching tide
 Will shortly fill the reasonable shore
 That now lies foul and muddy. Not one of them
 That yet looks on me, or would know me.—Ariel,
 Fetch me the hat and rapier in my cell ;
 I will discase me, and myself present
 As I was sometime Milan. Quickly, spirit ;
 Thou shalt ere long be free.

ARIEL sings, and helps to attire him.

Where the bee sucks, there suck I :

In a cowslip's bell I lie ;

There I couch when owls do cry. 90

On the bat's back I do fly

After summer merrily.

Merrily, merrily, shall I live now

Under the blossom that hangs on the bough.

Prospero. Why, that 's my dainty Ariel! I shall miss thee ;

But yet thou shalt have freedom :—so, so, so.—

To the king's ship, invisible as thou art :

There shalt thou find the mariners asleep

Under the hatches ; the master and the boatswain

Being awake, enforce them to this place,

100

And presently, I prithee.

Ariel. I drink the air before me, and return
Or ere your pulse twice beat.

[Exit.]

Gonzalo. All torment, trouble, wonder, and amazement
Inhabits here ; some heavenly power guide us
Out of this fearful country !

Prospero. Behold, sir king,
The wronged Duke of Milan, Prospero !
For more assurance that a living prince
Does now speak to thee, I embrace thy body ;
And to thee and thy company I bid
A hearty welcome.

110

Alonso. Whether thou beest he or no,
Or some enchanted trifle to abuse me,
As late I have been, I not know : thy pulse
Beats, as of flesh and blood ; and, since I saw thee,
The affliction of my mind amends, with which,
I fear, a madness held me. This must crave—
An if this be at all—a most strange story.
Thy dukedom I resign, and do entreat
Thou pardon me my wrongs.—But how should Prospero
Be living and be here ?

Prospero. First, noble friend,
Let me embrace thine age, whose honour cannot
Be measur'd or confin'd.

120

Gonzalo. Whether this be
Or be not, I 'll not swear.

Prospero. You do yet taste

Some subtleties o' the isle, that will not let you Believe things certain.—Welcome, my friends all!— [Aside to Sebastian and Antonio] But you, my brace of lords, were I so minded,
 I here could pluck his highness' frown upon you,
 And justify you traitors ; at this time
 I'll tell no tales.

Sebastian. [Aside] The devil speaks in him.

Prospero.

No.—

For you, most wicked sir, whom to call brother
 Would even infect my mouth, I do forgive
 Thy rankest fault,—all of them ; and require
 My dukedom of thee, which perforce I know
 Thou must restore.

130

Alonso. If thou beest Prospero,
 Give us particulars of thy preservation ;
 How thou hast met us here, whom three hours since
 Were wrack'd upon this shore, where I have lost—
 How sharp the point of this remembrance is!—
 My dear son Ferdinand.

Prospero.

I am woe for 't, sir.

Alonso. Irreparable is the loss, and patience
 Says it is past her cure.

140

Prospero.

I rather think

You have not sought her help, of whose soft grace
 For the like loss I have her sovereign aid,
 And rest myself content.

Alonso.

You the like loss?

Prospero. As great to me as late ; and supportable
 To make the dear loss have I means much weaker
 Than you may call to comfort you, for I
 Have lost my daughter.

Alonso.

A daughter?

O heavens, that they were living both in Naples,
 The king and queen there ! that they were, I wish

150

Myself were mudded in that oozy bed
 Where my son lies. When did you lose your daughter?
Prospero. In this last tempest. I perceive, these lords
 At this encounter do so much admire
 That they devour their reason, and scarce think
 Their eyes do offices of truth, their words
 Are natural breath: but, howsoe'er you have Been justled from your senses, know for certain
 That I am Prospero, and that very duke
 Which was thrust forth of Milan; who most strangely 160
 Upon this shore, where you were wrack'd, was landed,
 To be the lord on 't. No more yet of this;
 For 't is a chronicle of day by day,
 Not a relation for a breakfast, nor Befitting this first meeting. Welcome, sir;
 This cell's my court: here have I few attendants,
 And subjects none abroad; pray you, look in.
 My dukedom since you have given me again,
 I will requite you with as good a thing;
 At least bring forth a wonder, to content ye 170
 As much as me my dukedom.

Here PROSPERO discovers FERDINAND and MIRANDA playing at chess.

Miranda. Sweet lord, you play me false.

Ferdinand. No, my dear'st love,
 I would not for the world.

Miranda. Yes, for a score of kingdoms you should wrangle,
 And I would call it fair play.

Alonso. If this prove
 A vision of the island, one dear son
 Shall I twice lose.

Sebastian. A most high miracle!

Ferdinand. Though the seas threaten, they are merciful;
 I have curs'd them without cause. [Kneels.

Alonso. Now all the blessings
Of a glad father compass thee about !
Arise, and say how thou cam'st here. 180

Miranda. O, wonder !
How many goodly creatures are there here !
How beauteous mankind is ! O brave new world,
That has such people in 't !

Prospero. 'T is new to thee.

Alonso. What is this maid with whom thou wast at play ?
Your eld'st acquaintance cannot be three hours ;
Is she the goddess that hath sever'd us,
And brought us thus together ?

Ferdinand. Sir, she is mortal,
But by immortal Providence she 's mine ;
I chose her when I could not ask my father 190
For his advice, nor thought I had one. She
Is daughter to this famous Duke of Milan,
Of whom so often I have heard renown,
But never saw before ; of whom I have Receiv'd a second life, and second father
This lady makes him to me.

Alonso. I am hers.
But, O, how oddly will it sound that I
Must ask my child forgiveness !

Prospero. There, sir, stop ;
Let us not burthen our remembrances
With a heaviness that 's gone.

Gonzalo. I have inly wept, 200
Or should have spoke ere this.—Look down, you gods,
And on this couple drop a blessed crown !
For it is you that have chalk'd forth the way
Which brought us hither.

Alonso. I say Amen, Gonzalo !

Gonzalo. Was Milan thrust from Milan, that his issue Should become kings of Naples ? O, rejoice

Beyond a common joy! and set it down
 With gold on lasting pillars: In one voyage
 Did Claribel her husband find at Tunis;
 And Ferdinand her brother found a wife,
 Where he himself was lost; Prospero his dukedom,
 In a poor isle; and all of us ourselves,
 When no man was his own.

210

Alonso. [to Ferdinand and Miranda] Give me your hands;
 Let grief and sorrow still embrace his heart
 That doth not wish you joy!

Gonzalo. Be it so! Amen!—

Enter ARIEL, with the Master and Boatswain amazedly following.

O, look, sir! look, sir! here is more of us!
 I prophesied, if a gallows were on land,
 This fellow could not drown.—Now, blasphemy,
 That swear'st grace o'erboard, not an oath on shore?
 Hast thou no mouth by land? What is the news?

220

Boatswain. The best news is, that we have safely found
 Our king and company; the next, our ship—
 Which, but three glasses since, we gave out split—
 Is tight, and yare, and bravely rigg'd as when
 We first put out to sea.

Ariel. [Aside to Prospero] Sir, all this service
 Have I done since I went.

Prospero. [Aside to Ariel] My tricky spirit!

Alonso. These are not natural events; they strengthen
 From strange to stranger.—Say, how came you hither?

Boatswain. If I did think, sir, I were well awake,
 I'd strive to tell you. We were dead of sleep,
 And—how we know not—all clapp'd under hatches;
 Where, but even now, with strange and several noises
 Of roaring, shrieking, howling, jingling chains,
 And moe diversity of sounds, all horrible,

230

We were awak'd ; straightway, at liberty ;
 Where we, in all her trim, freshly beheld
 Our royal, good, and gallant ship ; our master
 Capering to eye her. On a trice, so please you,
 Even in a dream, were we divided from them
 And were brought moping hither.

Ariel. [Aside to Prospero] Was 't well done? 240

Prospero. [Aside to Ariel] Bravely, my diligence. Thou shalt be free.

Alonso. This is as strange a maze as e'er men trod ;
 And there is in this business more than nature
 Was ever conduct of: some oracle
 Must rectify our knowledge.

Prospero. Sir, my liege,
 Do not infest your mind with beating on
 The strangeness of this business. At pick'd leisure,
 Which shall be shortly, single I 'll resolve you,
 Which to you shall seem probable, of every
 These happen'd accidents ; till when, be cheerful, 250
 And think of each thing well.—[Aside to Ariel] Come hither, spirit :

Set Caliban and his companions free ;
 Untie the spell.—[Exit Ariel.] How fares my gracious sir ?
 There are yet missing of your company
 Some few odd lads that you remember not.

Enter ARIEL, driving in CALIBAN, STEPHANO, and TRINCULO, in their stolen apparel.

Stephano. Every man shift for all the rest, and let no man take care for himself, for all is but fortune.—Coragio, bullymonster, coragio !

Trinculo. If these be true spies which I wear in my head, here 's a goodly sight. 260

Caliban. O Setebos, these be brave spirits indeed !

How fine my master is! I am afraid
He will chastise me.

Sebastian. Ha, ha!

What things are these, my lord Antonio?
Will money buy 'em?

Antonio. Very like; one of them
Is a plain fish, and no doubt marketable.

Prospero. Mark but the badges of these men, my lords,
Then say if they be true.—This misshapen knave,
His mother was a witch; and one so strong
That could control the moon, make flows and ebbs, 270
And deal in her command without her power.
'These three have robb'd me; and this demi-devil—
For he's a bastard one—had plotted with them
To take my life. Two of these fellows you Must know and own; this thing of darkness I Acknowledge mine.

Caliban. I shall be pinch'd to death.

Alonso. Is not this Stephano, my drunken butler?

Sebastian. He is drunk now; where had he wine?

Alonso. And Trinculo is reeling-ripe; where should they Find this grand liquor that hath gilded 'em? 280
How cam'st thou in this pickle?

Trinculo. I have been in such a pickle, since I saw you last, that, I fear me, will never out of my bones; I shall not fear fly-blowing.

Sebastian. Why, how now, Stephano!

Stephano. O, touch me not; I am not Stephano, but a cramp.

Prospero. You'd be king o' the isle, sirrah?

Stephano. I should have been a sore one, then.

Alonso. This is a strange thing as e'er I look'd on. 290

[Pointing to Caliban.

Prospero. He is as disproportion'd in his manners
As in his shape.—Go, sirrah, to my cell;

Take with you your companions ; as you look
To have my pardon, trim it handsomely.

Caliban. Ay, that I will ; and I 'll be wise hereafter,
And seek for grace. What a thrice-double ass
Was I, to take this drunkard for a god,
And worship this dull fool !

Prospero. Go to ; away !

Alonso. Hence, and bestow your luggage where you found it.

Sebastian. Or stole it, rather.

300

[Exeunt Caliban, Stephano, and Trinculo.]

Prospero. Sir, I invite your highness and your train
To my poor cell, where you shall take your rest
For this one night ; which, part of it, I 'll waste
With such discourse as, I not doubt, shall make it
Go quick away,—the story of my life,
And the particular accidents gone by
Since I came to this isle : and in the morn
I 'll bring you to your ship, and so to Naples,
Where I have hope to see the nuptial
Of these our dear-belov'd solemnized ;
And thence retire me to my Milan, where
Every third thought shall be my grave.

310

Alonso. I long

To hear the story of your life, which must Take the ear strangely.

Prospero. I 'll deliver all ;

And promise you calm seas, auspicious gales,
And sail so expeditious that shall catch
Your royal fleet far off.—[Aside to Ariel] My Ariel, chick,
That is thy charge ; then to the elements
Be free, and fare thou well !—Please you, draw near.

[Exeunt.]

NOTES.

ABBREVIATIONS USED IN THE NOTES.

- Abbott (or Gr.), Abbott's Shakespearian Grammar (third edition).
 A. S., Anglo-Saxon.
 A. V., Authorized Version of the Bible (1611).
 B. and F., Beaumont and Fletcher.
 B. J., Ben Jonson.
 Camb. ed., "Cambridge edition" of Shakespeare, edited by Clark and Wright.
 Cf. (confer), compare.
 Clarke, "Cassell's Illustrated Shakespeare," edited by Charles and Mary Cowden-Clarke (London, n. d.).
 Coll., Collier (second edition).
 Coll. MS., Manuscript Corrections of Second Folio, edited by Collier.
 D., Dyce (second edition).
 H., Hudson ("Harvard" edition).
 Halliwell, J. O. Halliwell (folio ed. of Shakespeare).
 Id. (idem), the same.
 K., Knight (second edition).
 Nares, Glossary, edited by Halliwell and Wright (London, 1859).
 Phila. ed., Notes of Studies on The Tempest, by Shakespeare Society of Phila. (60 copies privately printed, 1865).
 Prol., Prologue.
 Rich., Richardson's Dictionary (London, 1838).
 S., Shakespeare.
 Schmidt, A. Schmidt's Shakespeare-Lexicon (Berlin, 1874).
 Sr., Singer.
 St., Staunton.
 Theo., Theobald.
 V., Verplanck.
 W., R. Grant White.
 Walker, Wm. Sidney Walker's Critical Examination of the Text of Shakespeare (London, 1860).
 Warb., Warburton.
 Wb., Webster's Dictionary (revised quarto edition of 1879).
 Worc., Worcester's Dictionary (quarto edition).
 Wr., W. A. Wright's "Clarendon Press" edition of Temp. (Oxford, 1874).

The abbreviations of the names of Shakespeare's Plays will be readily understood; as T. N. for Twelfth Night, Cor. for Coriolanus, 3 Hen. VI. for The Third Part of King Henry the Sixth, etc. P. P. refers to The Passionate Pilgrim; V. and A. to Venus and Adonis; L. C. to Lover's Complaint; and Sonn. to the Sonnets.

When the abbreviation of the name of a play is followed by a reference to page, Rolfe's edition of the play is meant.

The numbers of the lines (except for the present play) are those of the "Globe" ed.

NOTES.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—In the first folio, the play is divided into acts and scenes. At the end, printed side by side with the Epilogue, a list of dramatis personæ is given, under the heading “Names of the Actors,” and above this is “The Scene, an vn-inhabited Island.” Cf. Oth. p. 153.

3. Good, speak to the mariners. That is, good boatswain or fellow, as D., W., and others explain it. The folio has “Good: Speake to th’ Mariners:” and some retain that pointing, making good=good cheer. But the cheer was not good, as they were running aground. Cf. also just below, “Nay, good, be patient,” and Ham. i. 1. 70: “Good now, sit down.” See also C. of E. p. 140.

Yarely. Readily, nimbly; from yare, quick, active. Cf. A. and C. ii. 2. 216: “That yarely frame the office;” and for yare, T. N. iii. 4. 244: “be yare in thy preparation;” A. and C. v. 2. 286: “Yare, yare, good Iras, quick,” etc. So in Chaucer, Legend of Good Women, 2268: “This Te-reus let make hys shippes yare;” that is, had his ships made ready.

5. Cheerly. An example of “-ly found with a noun, and yet not appearing to convey an adjectival meaning.” Gr. 447. Cf. “angrily,” Macb. iii. 5. 1; “hungrily,” Oth. iii. 4. 105, etc. S. uses cheerly often, but cheerily not once. Rich. gives an example of the latter from B. and F. Milton has cheerily in L’Allegro—the only instance in which he uses either.

6. Tend. Attend; as in i. 2. 47 below. Cf. Rich. III. iv. 1. 93: "Good angels tend thee!" etc.

7. If room enough. If there be sea-room enough. Cf. Per. iii. 1. 45: "But sea-room, an the brine and cloudy billow kiss the moon, I care not."

9. Play the men. Play the part of men, behave like men; as in Hen. VI. i. 6. 16: "When they shall hear how we have play'd the men." Cf. Chapman's Iliad, bk. v.:

"Which doing, thou shalt know what souldiers play the men,
And what the cowards;"

and Marlowe's Tamburlaine, i. 1: "Viceroys and peers of Turkey, play the men." See also 2 Sam. x. 12.

13. You do assist the storm. Cf. Per. iii. 1. 19: "Patience, good sir; do not assist the storm."

15. What cares these roarers, etc. Some editors change cares to care, but the singular (or the old plural, as Abbott considers it) is often used before a plural subject. See Gr. 335; and cf. iv. 1. 259 below. Of course no typographical error is possible in cases where the rhyme requires the form in -s; as in Rich. II. iii. 3. 168:

"There lies
Two kinsmen digg'd their graves with weeping eyes;"

and L. C. 230:

"And to their audit comes
Their distract parcels in combined sums."

16. To cabin. Abbott (Gr. 90) gives many similar examples of the omission of the; as "at door" (W. T. iv. 4. 352 and T. of S. iv. 1. 125), "at end" (Cor. iv. 7. 4), "to west" (Sonn. 33. 8), etc.

21. Of the present. Cf. J. C. i. 2. 165: "For this present;" and 1 Cor. xv. 6.

Hand. Lay hands on, touch; as in W. T. ii. 3. 63:

"Let him that makes but trifles of his eyes
First hand me."

27. He hath no drowning mark upon him, etc. The allusion to the familiar proverb is obvious. Cf. T. G. of V. i. 1. 156:

"Go, go, begone to save your ship from wrack,
Which cannot perish having thee aboard,
Being destin'd to a drier death on shore."

See also v. 1. 217 below. H. makes complexion—"nature, native bent" (a sense it occasionally has in S.), but it is better to explain it as "external appearance" (Schmidt). The gallows complexion is opposed to the "drowning mark."

32. Down with the topmast, etc. Striking the topmast was a new invention in S.'s time, which he here very properly introduces. See the comments of Lord Mulgrave, p. 145 below. Lower is in the imperative mood.

33. Bring her to try wi' the main course. Keep her as close to the wind as possible with the mainsail. Malone quotes Hakluyt's Voyages (1598): "And when the barke had way, we cut the hauser, and so gate the sea to our friend, and tried out all that day with our maine course." The phrase is also found in Smith's Sea-Grammar, 1627. The folio reads, "bring her to Try with Maine-course;" and W. thinks it should be pointed thus: "Bring her to: try wi' the main course."

39. Incharitable. Used by S. only here. Uncharitable he does not use at all; but we find uncharitably in Rich. III. i. 3. 275. Cf. K. John, p. 143, note on Infortunate. Gr. 442.

43. I'll warrant him for drowning. For here may be either "as regards" or "against" (Gr. 154). For the latter meaning, cf. B. and F., Captain, iii. 5: "We'll have a bib for spoiling of thy doublet;" Lyly, Euphues: "If he were too long for the bed, they cut off his legs, for catching cold," etc.

45. Lay her a-hold, a-hold. To lay a ship a-hold is to bring her to lie as near to the wind as she can, in order to keep clear of the land, and get her out to sea (Steevens).

Set her two courses. That is, the mainsail (the main course above) and foresail. The folio reads: "Lay her a hold, a hold, set her two courses off to sea againe, lay her off," and some modern editors put no point after "courses."

48. Must our mouths be cold? Must we die? It has been suggested (Phila. ed.) that it may mean, Must we resort to cowardly prayers? and the following from B. and F. (Sea Voyage, i. 1, an imitation of The Tempest) is cited in support of the explanation:

"Thou rascal, thou fearful rogue, thou hast been praying:
 is this a time
 To discourage our friends with your cold orisons?"

51. We are merely cheated, etc. Absolutely cheated. Cf. M. of V. iii. 2. 265: "mere enemy;" Oth. ii. 2. 3: "the mere perdition (that is, the entire destruction) of the Turkish fleet;" Hen. VIII. iii. 2. 329: "the mere undoing (the complete ruin) of all the kingdom," etc. So in Bacon's 58th Essay: "As for conflagrations and great droughts, they do not merely (that is, entirely) dispeople and destroy;" where most of the modern editors (Montague and Whately included), mistaking the meaning, have changed "and destroy" to "but destroy." See also Ham. i. 2. 137, etc.

55. To glut him. To swallow him; the only instance of this sense in S. Cf. Milton, P. L. x. 633: "sucked and glutted offal."

61. Long heath, brown furze. Hanmer suggested "ling, heath, broom, furze," which D. adopts; but there seems to be no sufficient reason for altering the text of the folio.

SCENE II.—4. Mounting to the welkin's cheek. Cf. Rich. II. iii. 3. 57:

"Their thundering shock
 At meeting tears the cloudy cheeks of heaven."

5. Fire. A dissyllable. Gr. 480.

7. Who had no doubt some noble creature in her. On who=which, see Gr. 264. D., St., and others change creature to "creatures."

11. Or ere. The or is undoubtedly the A. S. ær (our ere) which appears in early English in the forms er, air, ar, ear, or, eror. We find or=before in Chaucer, as in the Knichtes Tale, 1685: "Cleer was the day, as I have told or this;" and later, as in Latimer and Ascham. Ere seems to have been added to or for emphasis when the meaning of the latter was dying out. In early English we find such combinations as erst er, bifore er, before or (Mätzner, iii. 451).

Some explain or ere, which they write or e'er, as a contraction of or ever=before ever. Or ever is, indeed, not unfrequently found (in the Bible, for instance, in Eccles. xii. 6, Prov. viii. 23, Dan. vi. 24, etc.); but, as Abbott remarks (Gr. 131), it is much more likely that ever should be substituted for ere than ere for ever.

13. Fraughting. Making up her fraught, or freight. S. does not use freight, either as a verb or a noun. Cf. M. of V. p. 145.

19. More better. For double comparatives and superlatives in S., see M. of V. p. 159, or Gr. II. Cf. 438 below.

20. Full. To the full, very. Cf. A. and C. i. 1. 59: "full sorry," etc.

22. Meddle with my thoughts. That is, mingle with them. Cf. Wiclif, Matt. xxvii. 24: "wyn medlid with gall;" John, xix. 39: "a medling of myrre and aloes;" Chaucer, Legend of Good Women, 874: "How medeleth she his blood with hir compleynte?" Spenser, Shep. Kal. Apr. 68: "The redde rose meddled with the white yfere;" Hooker, Eccl. Pol. iv. 8: "A meddled estate of the orders of the Gospel and the ceremonies of poperie," etc.

24. Pluck. A pet word with S. See Cor. p. 204, or Lear, p. 238.

25. Lie there, my art. Fuller (Holy State, iv. 6) says that Lord Burleigh, when he put off his gown at night, used to say, "Lie there, Lord Treasurer."

26. Wrack. The word is invariably wrack in S., and was so pronounced. Cf. the rhymes in V. and A. 558, R. of L. 841, 965, Sonn. 126. 5, Mach. v. 5. 51, etc.

27. The very virtue of compassion. The very essence or soul of it.

28. I have with such provision. Hunter suggested "prevision," which D. and H. adopt; but, as Mrs. Kemble remarks (Atlantic Monthly, vol. viii. p. 290), "It is very true that provision means the foresight that his art gave him, but provision implies the exercise of that foresight or prevision ; it is therefore better, because more comprehensive."

29. So safely order'd, that there is no soul— This is quite obviously an instance of anacoluthon, but Theo. proposed "no foil," and Pope followed him. Capell read "no loss;" Rowe and Warb., "no soul lost." Johnson suggested "no soil."

31. Betid. The -ed of the participle is often omitted after d and t. Gr. 342. Cf. quit in 148 below.

32. Which thou, etc. For the arrangement of clauses, cf. Mach. i. 3. 60, 61; and see our ed. p. 162.

41. Out. Fully, completely. Abbott (Gr. 183) makes it =beyond. Cf. iv. 1. 101 below: "right out."

53. Twelve year since, etc. The folio reads, "Twelue yere since (Miranda), twelue yere since." Pope needlessly changed year to "years."

Cf. Rich. II. p. 182, note on 91. For the scanning of the line, see Gr. 480. The first year is a dissyllable.

56. Piece. Model, masterpiece. Cf. A. and C. iii. 2. 28, and see our ed. p. 193.

58. And his only heir, etc. The reading of the folio is,

"Was Duke of Millaine, and his onely heire,
And Princesse; no worse Issued."

With a slight change in the pointing this is clear enough, but Hanmer made it read

"Was Duke of Milan; thou his only heir
And princess, no worse issued."

Pope then changed "And princess" to "A princess." D. adopts both emendations.

63. Holp. For holpen, the old participle of help. For the full form see Ps. lxxxiii. 8, Dan. xi. 34, etc. The contracted form is common in early writers; as in Piers the Plowman's Vision, iv. 169: "For ofte haue I, quod he, holpe you atte barre." Holp is properly the past tense of help, and S. uses it oftener than helped. See K. John, p. 138, or 1 Hen. IV. p. 147.

64. Teen. Grief, trouble. Cf. R. and J. i. 3. 13: "to my teen be it spoken;" L. L. L. iv. 3. 164: "of groans, of sorrow, and of teen," etc. See also Spenser, F. Q. i. 9. 34: "for dread and dolefull teen;" Shep. Kal. Nov. 41: "my woful teen," etc.

65. From my remembrance. That is, away from it. From is often so used; as in J. C. i. 3. 35: "clean from the purpose;" T. N. i. 5. 201: "This is from my commission," etc. See Gr. 158.

67. My brother and thy uncle, etc. This, with the following speech of Prospero, has well been called "a network of anacolutha." "The subject, My brother, is dropped, and taken up again as he whom, and finally in false uncle, before its verb (but only after another interruption) is reached in new created. A parenthesis begins with as at that time; but it ceases to be treated as a parenthesis, and eddies into the main current of expression at those being all my study" (Phila. ed.).

70. Manage. For the noun, cf. M. of V. iii. 4. 25; and see our ed. p. 153.

As at that time. The as is probably redundant here, as it often is in statements of time. In early English as is often prefixed to dates: "as this year of grace," etc. Chaucer has as now, as here, etc. = now, here, etc. Prof. G. Allen (Phila. ed.), who was the first to call attention to this use of as in S., quotes the Collect for Christmas in the Prayer-Book: "Almighty God, who hast given us thy only-begotten Son to take our nature upon him, and as at this time to be born," etc. See also Gr. 114. Cf. M. for M. v. 1. 74: "One Lucio as then the messenger."

71. Through all the signiories it was the first. Botero (Relations of the World, 1630) says, "Milan claims to be the first duchy in Europe."

80. Who to advance, etc. On who=whom, see Gr. 274.

81. To trash for overtopping. A metaphor taken from hunting. To trash a hound was to check or hamper him, so that he would not overtop or outrun the pack. Cf. Oth. ii. 1. 312:

"If this poor trash of Venice, whom I trash
For his quick hunting."

Warb. and Steevens make trash=lop, or prune.

83. Key. That is, tuning-key (Sir J. Hawkins).

85. That now, etc. So that now, etc.; a common ellipsis. Gr. 283.

86. The ivy, etc. The ivy was thought to be a parasitic plant and injurious to trees. Cf. C. of E. ii. 2. 180: "usurping ivy."

87. Out on't. For on=of, see Gr. 182.

90. Closeness. Privacy, seclusion; the only instance of the noun in S. Cf. "a close (secret) exploit of death" (Rich. III. iv. 2. 35); "we have closely (privately) sent for Hamlet" (Ham. iii. 1. 29), etc.

91. But by being so retir'd. "Were it only for the retirement it procured me;" or, perhaps, except for its being so retired.

94. Like a good parent. "Alluding to the observation that a father above the common rate of men has commonly a son below it. Heroum filii noxae" (Johnson).

95. It's. The folio spelling. See on 392 below.

97. Sans bound. Without limit. As Nares remarks, "a general combination seems to have subsisted, among all our poets, to introduce this French word, certainly very convenient for their verse, into the English language; but in vain; the country never received it, and it has always appeared as an exotic, even though the elder poets Anglicized its form into sauince, or gave it the English pronunciation." In a familiar passage in A. Y. L. (ii. 7. 166), S. uses it four times in a single line. See our ed. p. 163.

Lorded. Made a lord. Cf. strangered=made a stranger (Lear, i. 1. 207), and servanted=made subservient (Cor. v. 2. 89). But kinged=ruled (A. John, ii. 1. 371), fathered=provided with a father (J. C. ii. 1. 297 and Lear, iii. 6. 117), loved=gifted with a lover (L. C. 320), etc. See Gr. 294.

98. Revenue. The accent on the penult, as in Ham. iii. 2. 63: "from thee that no revenue hast," and M. N. D. i. 1. 158: "Of great revenue, and she hath no child;" but in the same scene of M. N. D. (6) we find it with the modern accent: "Long withering out a young man's revenue." For a list of words used by S. with "the accent nearer the end than with us," see Gr. 490; but revenue is omitted.

100. Unto truth, etc. The folio has "into," which D. retains, quoting as another instance of into for unto, "And pray God's blessing into thy attempt," A. W. i. 3. 260. In "telling of it," it refers to lie, by anticipation. The Coll. MS. has "having to untruth;" and H. changes telling to "falsing." As is omitted before "To credit." Cf. M. of V. iii. 3. 9: "so fond to come abroad," etc. Gr. 281.

106. Dost thou hear? On S.'s use of thou and you, see Gr. 231-235.

107. Screen. "Prospero was the screen behind which the traitorous Antonio governed the people of Milan" (Daniel).

109. Me, poor man! As for me. Gr. 201. D. says "For me . . . large enough," and compares T. of A. v. 1. 63:

"Whose thankless natures—O abhorred spirits!—
Not all the whips of heaven are large enough," etc.

III. Confederates. Conspires; the only instance of the verb in S.

112. Dry. Thirsty. Wr. says that this sense is "still common in provincial English;" and so it is in Yankee English. Cf. 1 Hen. IV. i. 3. 31, 2 Hen. VI. iv. 10. 14, etc.

117. His condition and the event. "The condition he made with the King of Naples, and the consequences which followed" (Wr.).

118. Might be. Could be. See Gr. 312.

119. To think but nobly. That is, otherwise than nobly. Gr. 124.

122. Hearkens. Cf. 2 Hen. IV. ii. 4. 303: "Hearken the end." Gr. 199.

123. In lieu o' the premises. In consideration of. Cf. "in lieu thereof" (T. G. of V. ii. 7. 88, and L. L. L. iii. 1. 130), "in lieu whereof" (K. John, v. 4. 44), etc.

125. Presently. Immediately; as in iv. 1. 42 below.

134. A hint. A cause, or subject. Cf. "our hint of woe," ii. 1. 3 below.

137. The which. See Gr. 270.

138. Impertinent. Irrelevant; used by S. only here and (by Launcelot) in M. of V. ii. 2. 146. Cf. the one instance of impertinency in Lear, iv. 6. 178.

139. Wench. This word originally meant young woman only, without the contempt now annexed to it. Cf. Hen. VIII. iv. 2. 167: "When I am dead, good wench," etc.; Oth. v. 2. 272: "O, ill-starred wench!" etc.

144. In few. In short. Cf. Ham. i. 3. 126: "in few, Ophelia," etc. See Gr. 5.

146. Boat. The folios have "butt" or "but;" corrected by Rowe (from Dryden's version).

148. Have quit. The reading of the folio, changed to "had quit" by D. For quit, see on betid, 31 above. Hoist is a similar contraction.

151. Did us but loving wrong. Only injured us by their sympathetic sighing, that is, blowing.

152. A cherubin. This is the reading of the folio here, as well as in T. of A. iv. 3. 63, Macb. i. 7. 22, Oth. iv. 2. 63, and L. C. 319, the only other places in which S. uses the singular, except Ham. iv. 3. 50, where cherub ("Cherube" in folio) occurs. He uses cherubins as the plural in M. of V. v. 1. 62, Hen. VIII. i. 1. 23, T. and C. iii. 2. 74, and Cymb. ii. 4. 88. Neither cherubim nor cherubims is to be found in the folio, though both are given in most modern editions and in Mrs. Clarke's Concordance.

154. Infused. Inspired, filled; as in Rich. II. iii. 2. 166, 3 Hen. VI. v. 4. 41, J. C. i. 3. 69, etc.

155. Deck'd. "Here deck'd would appear to be a form, if it be not a corruption, of the provincialism degg'd, i. e. sprinkled" (D.).

157. An undergoing stomach. A sustaining courage. Cf. 2 Hen. IV. i. 1. 129: "Gan vail his stomach" (began to let his courage sink), and Ham. i. 1. 100: "some enterprise That hath a stomach in 't" (that requires courage). Elsewhere it means anger, resentment, as in T. G. of V. i. 2. 68: "kill your stomach on your meat;" and pride, arrogance, as in Hen. VIII. iv. 2. 34: "He was a man of an unbounded stomach."

162. Who being, etc. A confused construction. Pope omits who, and Capell changes it to "he."

165. Have steaded much. Have been of much service. See M. of V. p. 133, note on Can you stead me?

169. But ever see that man. But see that man at any time. Gr. 39. Now I arise. It is doubtful what this means. The stage-direction, Puts on his robe, or Resumes his robe, given in some editions, is not found in the folio, but is due to Mr. Collier's MS. corrector. St. suggests that the words are spoken aside to Ariel. Wr. thinks they mean that "the crisis of his fortune was come," and quotes what Prospero says in 181-184. See Addenda below.

172. Made thee more profit Than other princess can. Profit is here a verb. Princess (the reading of the folio) is here for princesses. As Abbott (Gr. 471) has shown, "the plural and possessive cases of nouns of which the singular ends in s, se, ss, ce, and ge, are frequently written, and still more frequently pronounced, without the additional syllable." Cf. Macb. v. i. 29 (folio): "Their sense are shut;" Hen. V. v. 2. 28: "Your mightiness on both parts best can witness," etc. W. adopts Rowe's emendation of "princes," and gives quotations to show that "women as well as men of royal or ducal birth were called prince in S.'s day." But S. himself does not use prince for princess, while it is evident that he does drop the -es or 's in not a few such words. D. gives "princess'."

179. Now my dear lady. Now friendly to me; or, as Steevens puts it, "now my auspicious mistress." Cf. Lear, ii. i. 42.

181. I find my zenith, etc. Cf. J. C. iv. 3. 218: "There is a tide in the affairs of men," etc.

185. Thou art inclin'd to sleep. It is not easy to decide whether Miranda is put to sleep by the art of Prospero, or falls asleep from the effect of the strange things she has seen and heard. The latter view is well put by Franz Horn, who says: "The wonderful acts occasionally like the music upon Jessica in the fifth act of The Merchant of Venice. The external miracles of nature scarcely affect Miranda upon an island where nature itself has become a wonder, and the wonders have become nature. But for her, even on that account, there are only so many greater wonders in the heart and life of man. . . . The checkered course of the world, its wild passions, are to her wholly strange; and the relation of such wonders might well affect her in the manner her father fears."

190. To answer thy best pleasure; be't to fly, etc. Henley quotes the imitation of this passage by Fletcher, in The Faithful Shepherdess:

"Tell me, sweetest,
What new service now is meetest
For the satyre; shall I stray
In the middle ayre, and stay
The sailing rack, or nimbly take Hold by the moone, and gently make Suit to the pale queene of night,
For a beame to give thee light?
Shall I dive into the sea,
And bring thee coral, making way
Through the rising waves," etc.

193. Ariel and all his quality. That is, all his ability, his powers. D. explains it as "all those occupied in similar services, all his fellows."

194. Perform'd to point. Exactly, to the minutest point; like the French à point. See Gr. 187.

197. The waist. "That part of a ship which is contained between the quarter-deck and the fore-castle" (Falconer's Marine Dictionary).

198. I'd divide. Will and would are sometimes used to express a repeated or customary action. Gr. 330. Cf. Oth. i. 3. 147: "But still the house affairs would draw her hence;" and below, iii. 2. 132: "Sometimes a thousand twangling instruments Will hum about mine ears." So in Gray's Elegy: "His listless length at noontide would he stretch," etc.

200. Distinctly. In its original sense of separately. An allusion to the electrical phenomenon known as Saint Elmo's fire. In Hakluyt's Voyages (1598) there is the following description of it, which S. may have had in mind: "I do remember that in the great and boisterous storme of this foule weather, in the night there came upon the toppe of our maine yard and maine-mast a certaine little light, much like unto the light of a little candle, which the Spaniards call the Cuerpo Santo. This light continued aboard our ship about three houres, flying from maste to maste, and from top to top; and sometimes it would be in two or three places at once."

207. Coil. Turmoil, tumult. Cf. T. of A. i. 2. 236: "what a coil's here!" R. and J. ii. 5. 67: "here's such a coil!" etc. Constant=self-possessed. Cf. M. of V. p. 151.

209. Fever of the mad. Fever of delirium.

212. Afire. See Gr. 24.

213. With hair up-staring. See Gr. 429. Cf. J. C. iv. 3. 280: "That makest my blood cold and my hair to stare."

218. Their sustaining garments. Bearing or resisting the effects of the water (Mason and Schmidt). Some explain it as "bearing them up in the water." H. adopts Spedding's conjecture of "unstaining."

222. Cooling of the air. See Gr. 178. Cf. 3 Hen. VI. ii. 5. 3: "blowing of his nails;" J. C. v. 3. 38: "saving of thy life," etc.

224. In this sad knot. Folded thus. Cf. Ham. i. 5. 174.

229. Still-vex'd Bermoothes. The ever-disturbed Bermudas. "The epithet here applied to the Bermudas," says Henley, "will be best understood by those who have seen the chafing of the sea over the rugged rocks by which they are surrounded, and which render access to them so dangerous." On still=ever, see M. of V. p. 128.

231. Who, with a charm. See on 80 above.

232. For the rest. On for=as for, as regards, see Gr. 149.

234. Flote. Flood, wave; used by S. only here.

240. Two glasses. Two turns of the hour-glass, two hours.

242. Dost give me pains. Dost give me hard work to do.

243. Let me remember thee. Remind thee. Gr. 291. Cf. W. T. iii. 2. 231: "I'll not remember you of my own lord," etc. It is sometimes used in a similar sense (=mention) intransitively; as in 2 Hen. IV. v. 2. 142:

"Our coronation done, we will accite,
As I before remember'd, all our state."

Cf. 403 below: "The ditty does remember (mention, or commemorate) my drown'd father." The passive form to be remembered is sometimes =to call to mind, to recollect; as, "If you be remember'd" (M. for M.

ii. 1. 110 and T. of S. iv. 3. 96, "I am remember'd" (A. Y. L. iii. 5. 131), "Be you remember'd" (T. A. iv. 3. 5), etc.

244. Is not yet perform'd me. The me is the "indirect object" of the verb. Gr. 220. Cf. 255 below: "To do me business."

249. Grudge. Murmur, repining. Schmidt makes grudge or grumblings = "grudgings or grumblings." Cf. Gr. 397, 398. For the verb in this sense, see Much Ado, iii. 4. 90: "he eats his meat without grudging," etc.

250. To bate me. Cf. A. W. ii. 3. 234: "I will not bate thee a scruple," etc.

252. To tread the ooze. The bottom (not the margin) of the sea. Cf. Hen. V. i. 2. 164: "the ooze and bottom of the sea;" and below, iii. 3. 100: "my son i' the ooze is bedded."

258. Envy. Malice; as often. See M. of V. p. 156.

265. Argier. The old name for Algiers. It was not obsolete even in Dryden's day. See his Limberham, iii. 1: "you Argier's man."

266. One thing she did. But what it was the poet nowhere tells us. It may have been mentioned, Boswell thinks, in the novel on which the play was probably founded. H. changes did to "had" (cf. 269).

269. This blue-eyed hag. Staunton suggests "blear-eyed;" but cf. A. Y. L. p. 178 (on 347), or R. and J. p. 172 (on 39).

271. Wast then. The folio has "was then," and (as Walker suggests) that may be what S. wrote. So in 332 below the folio has "stroked'st and made much of me."

272. And for thou wast. And because thou wast. See Gr. 151, and M. of V. p. 134, note on For he is a Christian.

274. Hests. Commands. Sometimes printed "'hests," but it is not a contraction of behests. It is used again in iii. 1. 37 ("I have broke your hest"), and in iv. 1. 65 ("spongy April at thy hest betrim"); and also by Wiclif, Chaucer, Spenser, etc. Cf. Wb.

277. Into a cloven pine. We sometimes find into for in "with verbs of rest implying motion" (Gr. 159). See 359 below. Cf. Rich. III. v. 5. 51: "Is all my armour laid into my tent?" So we often find in with verbs of motion. Cf. M. of V. v. 1. 56: "creep in our ears;" Ham. v. 1. 301: "leaping in her grave," etc. "Fall in love" is still a familiar idiom.

284. Caliban. Farmer says, "The metathesis in Caliban from Canibal is evident."

297. Correspondent to command. That is, obedient to command. See Gr. p. 12 (viii.).

298. And do my spriting gently. Do my work as a spirit meekly, or with good will (as opposed to moody above). Some editors print "spiriting," but the folio has "sprying." Spirit is often virtually a monosyllable. Gr. 463.

301. Go make thyself, etc. The folio reads thus:

"Goe make thy selfe like a Nymph o' th' Sea,
Be subject to no sight but thine, and mine: inuisible
To euery eye-ball else," etc.

This is well enough with a slight change in arrangement, as in the text; but Stevens omits the thine as "ridiculous," and prints the lines as follows:

"Go make thyself like to a nymph o' the sea;
Be subject to no sight but mine: invisible," etc.

This reading is adopted by D. and H.

311. Miss. Do without. Schmidt compares Sonn. 122. 8, A. W. i. 3. 262, and Cor. ii. 1. 253. Wr. quotes Lyly, Euphues: "so necessary that we cannot misse them."

316. Come, thou tortoise! when? Cf. J. C. ii. 1. 5: "When, Lucius, when?" See also M. of V. p. 141, note on What, Jessica!

317. Fine apparition! My quaint Ariel. So below, "fine spirit," "fine Ariel," and "delicate Ariel." On quaint, see M. of V. p. 141.

320. Wicked. Baneful, poisonous. Cf. Chaucer, Rom. of the Rose: "a fruit of savour wicke."

322. South-west. On the southerly winds as associated by S. with fog, rain, and unwholesome vapours, see Cor. p. 206.

325. Urchins. Mischievous elves. Cf. M. W. iv. 4. 49: "urchins, ouphes (elves), and fairies." They were probably called so because they sometimes took the form of urchins, or hedgehogs. Cf. Caliban's account of Prospero's spirits in ii. 2. 5 fol. below.

326. That vast of night. That void, waste, or empty stretch. In Ham. i. 2. 198, the quarto of 1603 has "In the dead vast and middle of the night." Cf. our ed. p. 186.

328. Honeycomb. Plural (as made up of cells); used by S. only here.

332. Maid'st. The folios have "made;" corrected by Rowe (following Dryden). See on 271 above.

342. Whiles. See M. of V. p. 133, or Gr. 137.

349. Abhorred slave, etc. The folio gives this speech to Miranda, but this is obviously an error of the type; corrected by Dryden and Theo.

350. Which. On which=who, see Gr. 265.

359. Confin'd into this rock. See on 277 above.

361. On't. Of it. See M. of V. p. 143, or Gr. 182.

362. The red plague. The leprosy. See Levit. xiii. 42, 43. Steevens explains it as the erysipelas. Cf. Cor. p. 249, note on 13.

Rid you. Destroy you. Cf. Rich. II. v. 4. 11: "will rid his foe," and 3 Hen. VI. v. 5. 67: "you have rid this sweet young prince."

363. Learning me your language. Cf. Cymb. i. 5. 12: "Hast thou not learned me how To make perfumes?" In old English the word meant to teach as well as to learn. See Gr. 291.

364. Thou'rt best. Cf. J. C. iii. 3. 13: "Ay, and truly, you were best." For other examples of this old idiom, see Gr. 230.

367. Old cramps. Abundant cramps. On this intensive or augmentative use of old in colloquial language, see M. of V. p. 161.

368. Aches. The noun ache used to be pronounced aitch, but the verb ake (as it is often printed). Baret, in his Alvearie (1580), says: "Ake is the Verbe of the substantive ach, ch being turned into k." That the noun was pronounced like the name of the letter h is evident from a pun in Much Ado, iii. 4. 56:

"Beatrice. . . . By my troth, I am exceeding ill! Heigh-ho!

Margaret. For a hawk, a horse, or a husband?

Beatrice. For the letter that begins them all, H."

There is a similar joke in The World Runs upon Wheels, by John Taylor, the Water-Poet: "Every cart-horse doth know the letter G very understandingly; and H hath he in his bones." Boswell quotes an instance of this pronunciation from Swift, and Dyce one from Blackmore, A.D. 1705. When John Kemble first played Prospero in London, he pronounced aches in this passage as a dissyllable, which gave rise to a great dispute on the subject among critics. During this contest Mr. Kemble was laid up with sickness, and Mr. Cooke took his place in the play. Everybody listened eagerly for his pronunciation of aches, but he left the whole line out; whereupon the following appeared in the papers as "Cooke's Soliloquy:"

"Aitches or akes, shall I speak both or either?
If akes I violate my Shakespeare's measure—
If aitches I shall give King Johnny pleasure;
I've hit upon 't—by Jove, I'll utter neither!"

369. That. So that; as in 85 above. Gr. 283.

No, pray thee. This omission of I before pray thee, beseech thee, etc., is very common. See Gr. 401.

371. Setebos. S. probably got this name from the account of Magellan's voyages in Robert Eden's History of Travaille (A.D. 1577), where it is said of the Patagonians that "they roared lyke bulles, and cryed uppon their great devill, Setebos, to help them." Malone says that Setebos is also mentioned in Hakluyt's Voyages, 1598.

375. Curtisied. So spelled in the folios. Curtisy and courtesy are two forms of the same word, both found in the folio. In a single speech in J. C. (iii. i. 35 fol.), we have "courtesies" and "curtsies."

And kiss'd The wild waves whist. That is, kissed the wild waves into silence; "a delicate touch of poetry that is quite lost as the passage is usually printed, the line The wild waves whist being made parenthetical, and that, too, without any authority from the original" (II.). Whist is the participle of the old verb whist, which is found both transitive and intransitive. Lord Surrey translates the first line of Book II. of the Æneid: "They whisted all, with fixed face attent." Cf. Spenser, F. Q. vii. 7. 59: "So was the Titanesse put downe and whist." Milton (Hymn on Nativ.) has the same rhyme as here:

"The winds with wonder whist Smoothly the waters kiss'd."

377. Foot it featly. Dexterously, neatly. D. quotes Lodge's Glaucus and Scilla (1589): "Footing it featlie on the grassie ground." Cf. W. T. iv. 4. 176: "she dances featly." We have the adjective (used adverbially) below, ii. i. 268: "much feater than before;" and the verb in Cymb. i. i. 49: "a glass that feated them." On the it, see Gr. 226.

386. Where should this music be? "Should was used in direct questions about the past where shall was used about the future" (Gr. 325).

389. Weeping again. That is, again and again. Gr. 27. Cf. M. of V. iii. 2. 205: "For wooing here until I sweat again."

391. Passion. Sorrow. Cf. Ham. p. 212.

392. With it's sweet air. In the folio its occurs but once (M. for M. i. 2.

4), while it's is found nine times. It as a genitive (or "possessive") is found fourteen times, in seven of which it precedes own. This it is "an early provincial form of the old genitive." In our version of the Bible its is found only in Levit. xxv. 5, where the original edition has "of it own accord." See Gr. 228; and cf. W. T. p. 172, note on 178.

395. Full fathom five. The folio has "fadam," which Halliwell and White prefer to retain. In A. Y. L. iv. i. 210 the folio has "fathome."

396. Of his bones are coral made. S. may have written are to avoid the harshness of "bones is," but the inaccuracy is probably to be classed with those given by Abbott (Gr. 412) under "confusion of proximity."

397. Those are pearls, etc. In Rich. III. iv. 4. 322 we have tears "transform'd to orient pearl."

403. Ding, dong, bell. Cf. the Song in M. of V. iii. 2.

405. Nor no sound. On the double negative, see M. of V. p. 131, and Gr. 406. Owes=owns; as in 453 and iii. i. 45 below. Cf. Gr. 290.

407. The fringed curtains of thine eyes. Cf. Per. iii. 2. 101: "her eyelids Begin to part their fringes of bright gold." Advance=raise; as in iv. i. 177 below. Cf. Cor. p. 210.

408. What thou seest yond. Yond is the A. S. geond=illuc. Yond, meaning outrageous, furious (as in Spenser, F. Q. iii. 7. 26: "As Florimell fled from that Monster yond"), is probably the same word.

410. A brave form. On brave=fine, gallant, etc., see M. of V. p. 154.

413. And, but. On but=except, etc., see Gr. 120.

414. Canker. Canker-worm; a favourite metaphor with S. Cf. M. N. D. p. 150. H. thinks it may be ="rust or tarnish" (cf. V. and A. 767 and R. and J. i. i. 102).

420. Most sure, the goddess. Cf. the O dea certe of Virgil (Æn. i. 328).

421. Vouchsafe my prayer may know . . . and that you will. Here we have "that omitted and then inserted" (Gr. 285). Cf. Rich. II. v. i. 38: "Think I am dead, and that even here," etc.

426. Maid. A maid, and not a goddess. The 4th folio has made (that is, created, or mortal), which some modern editors adopt.

431. A single thing. A feeble thing. Cf. Macb. i. 3. 140: "shakes so my single state of man;" Id. i. 6. 16: "poor and single business," etc.

437. His brave son. This son is not one of the dramatis personæ, nor is he elsewhere mentioned in the play. See Addenda below.

438. More braver. See on 19 above.

Control thee. "Confute thee, unanswerably contradict thee" (Johnson).

440. Chang'd eyes. Exchanged looks of love. Cf. A. and C. iii. 13. 156.

442. Done yourself some wrong. Misrepresented yourself. Cf. M. W. iii. 3. 221: "You do yourself mighty wrong, Master Ford."

445. Pity move my father. An example of "the subjunctive used optatively." See Gr. 364.

446. O, if a virgin, etc. On the ellipsis, see Gr. 387.

449. In either's. In each other's; as in Sonn. 28. 5, Hen. V. ii. 2. 106, etc.

452. That thou attend me. "The subjunctive after verbs of command and entreaty is especially common" (Gr. 369). For the omission of the preposition, cf. M. of V. v. i. 103: "When neither is attended," etc. Gr. 200.

453. Owest not. Ownest not. Cf. 405 above.

456. There's nothing ill can dwell. On the omission of the relative, see Gr. 244.

460. I'll manacle thy neck and feet together. The cut illustrates this mode of punishment better than any description could do.

467. Gentle, and not fearful. Of gentle blood, and therefore no coward. Smollett (in Humphrey Clinker) says: "To this day a Scotch woman in the situation of the young lady in The Tempest would express herself nearly in the same terms—Don't provoke him; for, being gentle, that is, high-spirited, he won't tamely bear an insult."

468. My fool my tutor? "Shall my heel teach my head? Shall that which I tread upon give me law?" (V.) Walker proposes "fool," which D. and H. adopt.

470. Come from thy ward. Leave thy posture of defence. Ward was a technical term in fencing. Cf. 1 Hen. IV. ii. 4. 215: "Thou knowest my old ward; here I lay, and thus I bore my point."

472. Beseech you, father! See on 369 above.

477. There is no more such shapes. The reading of the folio, changed by many editors to "there are." But "there is" is often found preceding a plural subject. Cf. Cymb. iii. i. 36: "There is no moe such Cæsars;" Id. iv. 2. 371: "There is no more such masters," etc. Gr. 335.

483. Nerves. * Sinews; the only meaning that Schmidt recognizes. Cf. Ham. i. 4. 83, Macb. iii. 4. 102, Sonn. 120. 4. etc.

490. All corners else o' the earth. All other parts. Cf. M. of V. ii. 7. 39: "the four corners of the earth" (so in Isa. xi. 12), Cymb. iii. 4. 39: "all corners of the world," etc. In K. John (v. 7. 116) we find "the three corners of the world."

ACT II.

SCENE I.—3. Our hint of woe. The cause of our sorrow. See on i. 2. 134 above.

5. The masters of some merchant. This is the reading of the folio, and is somewhat doubtful, though masters may mean owners, or possibly officers. Steevens suggested “mistress” (the old spelling of which is sometimes “maistres”), and V. thinks it “not improbable” that this was S.’s word. D. and others read “master.” The Camb. editors conjecture “master’s” (sc. wife). The first merchant means a merchant vessel, or merchantman, as we say even now. Malone quotes Dryden (Parallel of Poetry and Painting): “Thus as convoy-ships either accompany or should accompany their merchants.”

11. The visitor. An allusion to priestly visitants of the sick or afflicted. Cf. Mutt. xxv. 36.

15. One; tell. There may be a play on one and on (that is, go on), the two words (see Nares on One) being pronounced, and sometimes written, alike. Tell=count. We still say “all told,” “wealth untold,” “to tell one’s beads,” etc., and a teller is one who counts (money, votes, etc.).

19. Dolour. Cf. the same play upon words in M. for M. i. 2. 50 and Lear, ii. 4. 54. Steevens quotes also The Tragedy of Hoffman, 1637:

“And his reward be thirteen hundred dollars,
For he hath driven dolour from our heart.”

28. Which, of he or Adrian. This is the reading of the folio. Cf. M. N. D. iii. 2. 337:

“Now follow, if thou dar’st, to try whose right,
Of thine or mine, is most in Helena.”

Walker quotes from Sidney’s Arcadia: “Who should be the former [that is, the first to fight] against Phalantus, of the black or the ill-apparelled knight.” Gr. 206, 409.

31. The cockerel. The young cock; that is, Adrian.

36. Ha, ha, ha! The folio gives this speech to Sebastian, and So, you’re paid to Antonio, and perhaps there is no need of change. On the whole, however, I prefer to follow W., who simply transposes the prefixes of the speeches on the ground that “Antonio won the wager, and was paid by having the laugh against Sebastian.” Theo. gave both speeches to Sebastian, and is followed by D., H., and the Camb. editors. Capell merely changes you’re to “you’ve.” K. retains the folio reading.

43. Temperance. Temperature. Antonio takes up the word as a female name, and it was so used by the Puritans.

53. Lush. Juicy, succulent, luxuriant. Not elsewhere used by S., though some read in M. N. D. ii. 1. 251, “Quite overcanopied with lush woodbine” where the folio has “luscious.” Lusty=vigorous.

55. An eye of green. A tinge of green. Boyle says, “Red, with an eye of blue, makes a purple.”

62. Freshness and glosses. The folio has “freshnesse and glosses.” Freshness may be plural, like princess in i. 2. 173 (“Than other princess can”). See note on that passage. D. reads “gloss.”

72. A paragon to their queen. For their queen. Cf. J. C. iii. i. 143: "I know that we shall have him well to friend;" Rich. II. iv. i. 306: "I have a king here to my flatterer;" also Matt. iii. 9, Luke, iii. 8, etc. Below (iii. 3. 54) we find "that hath to instrument this lower world." Gr. 189.

75. Widow Dido. The title of a popular song of that day. See Percy's Reliques, or Child's English and Scottish Ballads, vol. vii. p. 207.

79. Study of that. Study about that; wonder what you mean by it. See Gr. 174.

84. The miraculous harp. An allusion to the myth of Amphion, who raised the walls of Thebes by the power of his music.

106. In my rate. In my estimation or reckoning. Cf. i. 2. 92 above.

113. Whose enmity he flung aside, etc. Cf. J. C. i. 2. 107:

"The torrent roar'd, and we did buffet it
With lusty sinews, throwing it aside,
And stemming it with hearts of controversy."

117. His wave-worn basis. His for its. See Gr. 228.

118. I not doubt. This transposition of not is quite common. See below (v. i. 38), "whereof the ewe not bites," (113) "I not know," and (303) "I not doubt." See also Gr. 305. As stooping=as if stooping. Gr. 107.

124. Who hath cause to wet the grief on 't. Which (the eye) hath cause to weep. Cf. 2 Hen. IV. iv. 3. 120: "The heart Who great and puff'd up." See Gr. 264. Some make who refer to she.

125. Importun'd. Accented on the second syllable, as regularly in S. Cf. Ham. p. 190.

128. Which end o' the beam she'd bow. The folio has "should bow," which is probably a misprint for "sh'ould bow."

130. Moe. More; as in v. i. 234 below. Cf. M. of V. p. 129.

133. The dear'st o' the loss. "Throughout S., and all the poets of his and a much later day, we find this epithet (dearest) applied to that person or thing which, for or against us, excites the liveliest interest. . . . It may be said to be equivalent generally to very, and to import the excess, the utmost, the superlative, of that to which it is applied" (Caldecott). Cf. "dearest foe" (Ham. i. 2. 182), etc. See also v. i. 146 below.

140. Had I plantation. There is a play on the word plantation. Gonzalo uses it in the sense of colony (cf. Bacon, Ess. 33, Of Plantations), but Antonio takes it in the sense of planting.

144. I' the commonwealth, etc. This passage is evidently copied from Florio's translation of Montaigne's Essays, published in 1603, and therefore aids (see page 8 above) in fixing the date of the play. W. gives the quotation from Florio, as follows: "It is a nation, would I answer Plato, that hath no kinde of traffike, no knowledge of Letters, no intelligence of numbers, no name of magistrate, nor of politike superioritie; no use of service, of riches, or of povertie; no contracts, no successions, no dividences, no occupation, but idle; no respect of kinred, but common; no apparell, but naturall; no manuring of lands; no use of wine, corn, or mettle. The very words that import lying, falsehood, treason, dissimulation, covetousness, envie, detraction, and pardon were never heard amongst them."*

* The original runs thus: "C'est une nation, diroy ie a Platon, en laquelle il n'y a

149. Tillth. Tillage, or tilled land; as in M. for M. iv. i. 76: "our tilth's to sow."

160. Of it own kind. See on i. 2. 392 above.

Foison. Plenty; as in iv. i. 110 below. Cf. Mach. p. 240. The word is French (fuison in Old French), the Latin fusio, from fundere.

165. To excel. As to excel. Cf. M. of V. iii. 3. 9: "So fond to come abroad;" and see Gr. 281.

169. Sensible and nimble. Sensitive and excitable. See M. of V. p. 145. Cf. Ham. ii. 2. 337: "the clown shall make those laugh whose lungs are tickle o' the sere;" and see our ed. p. 206.

176. An it had not fallen flat-long. On an, see Gr. 101. Flat-long, that is, as if struck with the side of the sword instead of its edge. Flatling is used in the same sense; as in Spenser, F. Q. v. 5. 18: "Tho with her sword on him she flatling strooke."

178. Sphere. Alluding to the Ptolemaic astronomy. See Ham. p. 254.

180. A bat-fowling. On a, see Gr. 140. Bat-fowling was a method of fowling by night, in which the birds were started from their nests and stupefied by a sudden blaze of light. Markham, in his Hunger's Preuention, or the Whole Arte of Fowling, says, "I thinke meete to proceed to Batte-fowling, which is likewise a mighty taking of all sorts of great and small Birdes which rest not on the earth, but on Shrubbess, tal Bushes, Hathorne trees, and other trees, and may fitly and most conueniently be used in all woody, rough, and bushy countries, but not in the champaine."

182. Adventure my discretion. That is, venture or risk my [character for] discretion. Cf. Cymb. i. 6. 172: "that I have adventur'd To try," etc.

189. Omit the heavy offer of it. Neglect the offer of its heaviness. Omit often means to pass over, lay aside, or neglect; as in i. 2. 183 above. Cf. Oth. ii. i. 71: "do omit their mortal natures;" M. for M. iv. 3. 77: "What if we do omit This reprobate till he were well inclin'd?" etc.

202. What thou shouldst be. On should=ought, see Gr. 323.

The occasion speaks thee. "The opportunity which now occurs shows what you are intended for; that is, to be a king" (Jephson).

211. Wink'st. Dost shut thine eyes. Cf. 280 below.

215. If heed me. If you intend to heed me. Such ellipses in conditional sentences are common in S. See Gr. 383-393.

216. Trebles thee o'er. That is, over again. See Gr. 58a, and cf. M. of V. iii. 2. 154: "I would be trebled twenty times myself."

I am standing water. I am passive, ready to listen to you and to be influenced by you. He already guesses what Antonio means, and cherishes the purpose while he mocks it.

Stevens quotes the following from a critic in the Edinburgh Magazine for Nov. 1786: "Sebastian introduces the simile of water. It is taken up by Antonio, who says he will teach his stagnant water to flow. 'It has already learned to ebb,' says Sebastian. To which Antonio replies, 'O, if you but knew how much even that metaphor, which you use in jest, encourages to the design which I hint at; how, in stripping the words of their common meaning, and using them figuratively, you adapt them to your own situation!'" On ebbing men, cf. A. and C. i. 3. 43.

aucune espece de trafique, nulle cognoissance de lettres, nulle science de nombres, nul nom de magistrat ni de superiorité politique, nul usage de service, de richesse ou de pauvreté, nuls contracts, nulles successions, nuls partages, nulles occupations qu'oysives, nul respect de parenté que commun, nuls vestemens, nulle agriculture, nul metal, nul usage de vin ou de bled; les paroles mesmes qui signifient le mensonge, la trahison, la dissimulation, l'avarice, l'envie, la detraction, le pardon, inouyes."

227. This lord of weak remembrance. "This lord who, being now in his dotage, has outlived his faculty of remembering; and who, once laid in the ground, shall be as little remembered himself as he can now remember other things" (Johnson).

230. He's a spirit of persuasion. Monck Mason thought that "he's" is for "he has," not "he is," and quoted 1 Hen. IV. i. 2. 170: "Well, mayst thou have the spirit of persuasion," etc. Steevens regarded the words "professes to persuade" as a marginal gloss or paraphrase, which by some mistake became incorporated with the text, and D. appears to favour this view. Johnson could "draw no sense" from "this entangled sentence," but there seems to be no special difficulty in it. The parenthesis is clearly marked in the folio, thus:

"(For hee's a Spirit of perswasion, onely Professes to perswade) the King his sonne's aliuie," etc.

238. But doubts discovery there. But doubts whether there is anything to be discovered there. The folio has "doubt," which the Philadelphia editors think "may be retained;" "but doubt" being considered equal to "without doubting," or the "can not" being mentally carried on: "[can not] but doubt discovery there." Wr. adopts this last explanation.

242. Beyond man's life. An obvious and intentional hyperbole. Hunter (New Illustrations, vol. i. p. 166) thinks that Man's Life is probably the translation of the name of some African city, and finds an ancient city, named Zoa, not far from Tunis.

243. Can have no note. Can receive no information. Cf. Bacon, Ess. 49: "that if Intelligence of the Matter could not otherwise have beene had but by him, Advantage bee not taken of the Note, but the Partie left to his other Meanes."

244. The man i' the moon. This is one of the oldest of popular superstitions. According to one version, the man who gathered sticks on the Sabbath (Numb. xv. 32 fol.) was imprisoned in the moon; but another tradition made this lunar personage to be Cain. In the Testament of Cresseid (written by Henryson, but sometimes ascribed to Chaucer) we find the following in a description of the moon (Laing's ed., 1865):

"Hir gyse was gray, and full of spottis blak,
And on hir breist ane churlie paintit ful evin,
Beirand ane bunche of thornis on his bak,
Quhilk for his thift nicht clim na nar the hevin."

It will be recollected that the man in the moon is one of the characters in the clown's play in M. N. D. See our ed. p. 185, note on 237.

245. She from whom. That is, in coming from whom. The folio has "She that from whom." The emendation is Rowe's, and is generally adopted. Pope reads "She for whom;" and H. "She too for whom."

249. In yours and my discharge. Is in yours, etc.; that is, "depends on what you and I are to perform" (Steevens). "Act and prologue being technical terms of the stage, discharge also is so to be understood, as in M. N. D. i. 2. 95: "I will discharge it in either your straw-colour beard," etc." (Phila. ed.). Cf. Macb. i. 3. 128.

254. Measure us back. Us refers to that which is supposed to "cry out," or "every cubit."

257. There be, etc. See Gr. 300.

260. Could make a chough of as deep chat. Could train a chough to talk as wisely. Cf. A. W. iv. 1. 22: "chough's language, gabble enough, and good enough." Yarrel (History of British Birds) observes that in the description of Dover Cliff ("The crows and choughs that wing the midway air," Lear, iv. 6. 13), "possibly S. meant jackdaws, for in the M. N. D. [iii. 2. 21] he speaks of 'russet-pated' (gray-headed) choughs, which term is applicable to the jackdaw, but not to the real chough."

264. How does your content tender, etc. How does your favourable judgment regard. For tender = regard, value, cf. Hen. V. ii. 2. 175: "But we our kingdom's safety must so tender;" A. Y. L. v. 2. 77: "By my life, I do; which I tender dearly," etc.

268. Much feater. Much more neatly or trimly. See on i. 2. 377 above. Gr. 1.

271. If 't were a kibe, etc. If it were a sore heel, it would make me exchange my boot for a slipper. Cf. Ham. v. 1. 153: "the toe of the peasant comes so near the heel of the courtier, he galls his kibe."

274. Candied. Congealed (Schmidt); as in T. of A. iv. 2. 226: "Candied with ice," etc. Wr. explains it as "sugared over, and so insensible."

278. Wink. See on 211 above; and cf. W. T. i. 2. 317.

282. Should not upbraid. On should, see Gr. 322.

283. Suggestion. Temptation, "hint of villainy" (Johnson). Cf. iv. 1. 26 below. The verb is likewise used in the sense of tempt; as in T. G. of V. iii. 1. 34: "Knowing that tender youth is soon suggested," etc.

287. I'll come by Naples. Cf. M. of V. i. 1. 4: "But how I caught it, found it, or came by it;" and see Gr. 145.

290. When I rear my hand. Cf. J. C. iii. 1. 30: "Casca, you are the first that rears your hand."

291. To fall it. See M. of V. p. 135, and Gr. 291. Cf. v. 1. 64 below.

294. To keep them living. The folio reading. D. changes them to "thee." This is plausible; but, as Wr. suggests, "Ariel is half apostrophizing the sleeping Gonzalo, and half talking to himself."

301-304. Now . . . matter? We adopt the arrangement of speeches given by St. and D. The folio reads thus:

Gon. Now, good Angels preserve the King.

Ala. Why how now ho; awake? why are you drawn? wherefore this ghastly looking?

Gon. What's the matter?"

Cf. what Gonzalo says in 312-315 below.

303. Why are you drawn? Why are your swords drawn? See Gr. 374. Cf. R. and J. i. 1. 73: "What, art thou drawn among these heartless hinds?" See also M. N. D. iii. 2. 402, and Hen. V. ii. 1. 39.

314. Shak'd. S. generally uses shook, both as past tense and participle, but he has shaked in five instances, three being the participle. Gr. 343.

316. That's verily. Pope reads "That's verity." See Gr. 78.

SCENE II.—3. By inch-meal. Inch by inch. We still have piecemeal (not used by S.), but inch-meal, limb-meal (Cymb. ii. 4. 147: "tear her limb-meal"), drop-meal, and other compounds of the kind are obsolete. Meal here is the A. S. mæl (time, portion), not melu, melo (meal, flour).

5. Urchin-shows. Elfin apparitions. See on i. 2. 325 above.

9. Mow. Make faces. Cf. iv. 1. 47 below, and the stage-direction in iii. 3. 82, "with mocks and mows." Not from mouth, as some have made it, but (see Diez, Scheler, and Wb.) from the Fr. moue (pouting, wry face).

10. After. Cf. iii. 2. 144 below. Gr. 26.

11. Mount their pricks. Raise their prickles. Cf. Hen. VIII. i. 1. 144: "The fire that mounts the liquor till 't run o'er;" and Id. i. 2. 305: "mounting his eyes."

15. And to torment me. For the and, see Gr. 95 and 96.

20. Yond. See on i. 2. 408 above.

21. Bombard. Also spelled bumbard; a large flagon, or "black-jack," made of leather. Cf. i Hen. IV. ii. 4. 497: "that huge bombard of sack." Foul probably means black with age and decayed—ready to fall to pieces.

26. Poor-John. A cant name for salted hake, a coarse and cheap kind of fish. Cf. R. and J. i. 1. 37: "'T is well thou art not fish; if thou hadst, thou hadst been poor John." So in Massinger's Renegado, i. 1:

"To feed upon poor-john, when I see pheasants
And partridges on the table."

In B. and F.'s Scornful Lady (ii. 3), "pitch and poor-john" are mentioned as the foul odors of Thames Street, London.

29. Make a man. That is, make his fortune. Cf. M. N. D. iv. 2. 18, i Hen. IV. ii. 2. 60, etc.

30. Doit. The smallest of coin. Cf. M. of V. p. 136.

31. A dead Indian. Cf. 53 below: "savages and men of Ind." There may be an allusion to the Indians brought home by Sir Martin Frobisher in 1576.

36. Gaberdine. A loose frock. Cf. M. of V. p. 135.

38. Shroud. Take shelter. Both noun and verb were thus used. Cf. A. and C. iii. 13. 71: "Put yourself under his shroud" (his protection). See also Milton, Comus, 147: "Run to your shrouds;" and 316: "Or shroud within these limits;" Spenser, F. Q. i. 1. 8: "therein shrouded from the tempest dread," etc.

43. Swabber. One who swabs or mops the decks. Cf. T. N. i. 5. 217.

54. Scaped. Not to be printed "'scaped." See Macb. p. 214.

55. Proper. See M. of V. p. 132 (note on A proper man's picture).

57. At nostrils. In the folio this is printed "at' nostrils," and may be a misprint for "at 's nostrils;" but see Gr. 90.

69. Afore. This form was common in old English, and so was to-fore, which we find in T. A. iii. i. 294: "O, would thou wert as thou to-fore hast been!"

70. I will not take too much for him. That is, I will take all I can get.

75. Will give language to you, cat. Alluding to the proverb, "Good liquor will make a cat speak." In 88 below there is an allusion to the proverb, "He hath need of a long spoon, that eats with the devil."

96. Siege. Stool, excrement. It is used in the same sense by Ben Jonson and Sir Thomas Browne. Besides its ordinary meaning, it has also in S. the sense of seat (M. for M. iv. 2. 101: "the siege of justice"), and of rank, or place (Ham. iv. 7. 77: "the unworthiest siege;" Oth. i. 2. 22: "men of royal siege").

Moon-calf. A monstrosity, supposed to be occasioned by lunar influence. In Holland's Pliny (vii. 15) we find, "a moone-calfe, that is to say, a lump of flesh without shape, without life."

105. An if. See Gr. 101-103.

110. Sack. A name applied to Spanish and Canary wines. Cf. Hen. V. p. 187.

128. Thy dog and thy bush. See on ii. 1. 244 above. The bush was the bundle of sticks connected with the narrative in Numb. xv.

132. Afeard. Used interchangeably with afraid. See M. of V. p. 144.

133. Well drawn, monster. A good draught, monster.

154. Crabs. Crab-apples. "Roasted crabs" are mentioned in L. L. v. 2. 395 and M. N. D. ii. 1. 48. Cf. Lear, i. 5. 16: "as like this as a crab is like an apple," etc.

157. Marmoset. The word is used by S. only here, but is found in Mandeville and other early writers.

159. Scamels. This is the reading of the folio, but the word is found nowhere else. Some have thought it a diminutive of scam, a name by which the limpet is said to be known in some parts of England; others read "sea-mells" or "sea-malls" (the latter form is actually found as the name of a bird in Holme's Acad. of Armory, 1688); and others "stannels" or "staniels." Of these emendations the last is the most plausible. Montagu (Ornithological Dict.) says that the "Kestrel, Stannel, or Windhover . . . is one of our most common species [of hawks], especially in the more rocky situations and high cliffs on our coasts, where they breed." The bird is also mentioned by S. in T. N. ii. 5. 124: "And with what wing the staniel checks at it!" At least, no one doubts that this is the correct reading, though the old editions print "stallion."

162. Inheril. Take possession. Cf. the transitive use in iv. 1. 154 below.

169. Trenchering. The reading of the folio, changed to trencher by Theo., D., H., and most of the editors; but, as W. remarks, "surely they must have forgotten that Caliban was drunk, and after singing 'firing' and 'requiring' would naturally sing 'trenchering.' There is a drunken swing in the original line, which is entirely lost in the precise, curtailed rhythm of 'Nor scrape trencher, nor wash dish.'"

172. Hey-day. The folios have "high-day;" corrected by Rowe. Cf. Rich. III. p. 235.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—1. Painful=requiring pains, or laborious. Cf. L. L. L. ii. 1. 23: "painful study;" T. of S. v. 2. 149: "painful labour both by sea and land." Fuller (Holy War, v. 29) speaks of Joseph as "a painful carpenter," and in his Holy State (ii. 6) he says, "O the holiness of their living, and painfulness of their preaching!"

2. Delight in them sets off. Delight is the subject of sets off (=offsets). Cf. Macb. ii. 3. 55: "The labour we delight in physics pain."

6. The mistress which. See Gr. 265.

15. Most busy, lest when I do it. "This is the great crux of the play. Few passages in S. have been the subject of more conjecture, and to none has conjecture been applied with less happy results." The first folio reads, "Most busie lest, when I doe it;" the other three folios, "Most busie least, when I do it." Pope reads, "Least busie when I do it." Theo. gave "Most busie-less when I do it;" and Dr. Johnson puts "busiless" into his Dict., citing this passage to justify it. Neither Worc. nor Wb. recognizes the word. The editors from Theo. (1733) down to the Var. of 1821 adopted "busiless." The difficulty of the passage is well shown by the vacillation of the best modern critics. D. in his 2d ed. (1864) says that "busiless" is "far more satisfactory, on the whole, than any of the numerous emendations that have been proposed;" while in his 1st ed. (1857) he doubts "if so odd a compound ever occurred to anybody but the critic himself." K. in 1839 followed Theo., but in 1864 he adopts the reading of the later folios, defending it thus: "The opposition of most and least renders the line somewhat obscure; but if we omit most, reading 'Busy least when I do it,' the sense is clear enough. It is not less clear with most, so punctuated." W. in his Shakespeare's Scholar (1854) accepts "busy-less," and considers "busiest" to be "graceless and inappropriate;" but in his edition of S. (1857) he reads "busiest," adding this note: "The present text is the happy conjecture of Holt White. Busiest of course refers to thoughts. Ferdinand's 'sweet thoughts' of Miranda were busiest when he was labouring to win her." H. has "busiless" in his 1st ed., but now reads "Most busy when I do it least."

Of the other attempts at emendation the following are worthy of mention: that of the Coll. MS., "Most busy-blest when I do it;" Staunton's "Most busy felt when I do it;" Spedding's "Most busiest when idlest;" the Camb. editors' "Most busy left when idlest (cf. R. and J. i. i. 134);" and Keightley's "Most busy, lest when I do it—"

I have preferred, on the whole, to follow Verplanck and retain the reading of the folios ("lest" and "least" may be regarded as identical), with the slight change in punctuation. The passage may then be explained as follows: "In these reflections I forget my labours, which are even refreshed with the sweetness of the thoughts, and I am really most busy in mind, while I am least busy with my task—occupied with my thoughts, idlest with my hands." I take this paraphrase from the Phila. ed., where the passage is very fully and ably discussed.

On the transposition in least when, cf. i. 2. 375 above: "Curtsied when you have," etc. For transpositions in S., see Gr. 419-427.

31. And yours it is against. Cf. A. and C. ii. 4. 2: "Hasten your generals after;" A. W. iii. 4. 6: "the cold ground upon," etc. Gr. 203.

32. Visitation. Visit; its ordinary meaning in S. He does not use visit as a noun. Cf. M. of V. iv. i. 153: "in loving visitation was with me," etc. Wr. takes the word to be a continuation of the metaphor in infected, and quotes L. L. L. v. 2. 419-423.

Look wearily. Cf. T. G. of V. ii. i. 30: "looked sadly;" Much Ado, ii. i. 91: "look sweetly," etc.

37. Hest. See on i. 2. 274 above. Cf. 1 Hen. IV. ii. 3. 65: "On some great sudden hest" (quarto reading); and see also L. L. L. p. 157.

Admin'd Miranda! Ferdinand refers to the Latin origin of the name, from the gerundive of mirari, to admire.

38. The top of admiration. Cf. M. for M. ii. 2. 76: "the top of judgment;" Cor. i. 9. 24: "top of praises," etc.

42. Several. Separate. Cf. v. i. 232 below: "strange and several noises." So in Milton, Comus, 25: "commits to several government;" Hymn on Nativ. 234: "Each fetter'd ghost slips to his several grave," etc.

45. Owed. Owned, possessed. See on i. 2. 405 above.

46. Put it to the foil. "Foiled, defeated it" (Wr.).

53. Skilless. Ignorant. Cf. T. N. iii. 3. 9: "skilless in these parts."

57. To like of. Cf. Much Ado, v. 4. 59: "if you like of me;" L. L. L. i. 1. 107: "But like of each thing that in season grows," etc. Gr. 177.

62. Than to suffer. Pope reads "Than I would suffer;" but the insertion of to with a verb after its omission with a preceding one (especially an auxiliary) is not uncommon in S. Gr. 350. Cf. iv. 1. 72 below.

63. Blow. Cf. A. and C. v. 2. 60 and W. T. iv. 4. 820.

70. Hollowly. Insincerely. Cf. M. for M. ii. 3. 23:

"And try your penitence, if it be sound,
Or hollowly put on."

Invert. Change to the contrary; as in T. and C. v. 2. 122: "invert the attest of eyes and ears."

72. What else i' the world. Whatever else there is, anything else. Cf.

3 Hen. VI. iii. 1. 51: "With promise of his sister and what else." Gr. 255.

84. Your maid. Your maid-servant.

Fellow. Companion. The word was applied to both sexes. Cf. Judges, xi. 37 and Ps. xlv. 14 (Prayer-Book version). Companion was formerly used contemptuously, as fellow still is. Cf. J. C. iv. 3. 138: "Companion, hence!" and 2 Hen. VI. iv. 10. 33: "Why, rude companion," etc. It is found in this sense in Smollett's Roderick Random (1748): "Scurvy companion! Saucy tarpaulin! Rude, impertinent fellow!"

91. A thousand thousand. That is, farewells.

93. Who are surprised with all. To whom it is all a surprise. With all was changed by Theo. to "withal."

SCENE II.—2. Bear up. Take your course, sail up; as in Oth. i. 3. 8: "A Turkish fleet, and bearing up to Cyprus."

8. Set. Cf. T. N. v. 1. 205: "his eyes were set at eight i' the morning." Wr. cites also 1 Kings, xiv. 4.

14. Standard. Standard-bearer, or ensign. The quibbles on this word, and on lie, just below, are obvious enough.

24. Debosh'd. The old spelling of debauched, and the only one in the folio.

29. That a monster should be such a natural! A quibble on natural as opposed to monstrous and as = fool.

52. But this thing dare not. That is, would not dare. Gr. 361.

60. Pied ninny. Alluding to the motley dress of the professional jester, or fool, as the name patch (see M. of V. p. 142) perhaps does.

64. Quick freshes. Springs of fresh water. Quick (= living) is applied to water flowing from a spring, as "living" is in the Bible, etc.

67. Make a stock-fish of thee. "Beat thee as stock-fish (dried cod) is beaten before it is boiled" (D.).

87. Wezand. Throat, windpipe; the only instance of the word in S. It is also spelled weazand, wesand, and weasand.

89. A sot. A fool (Fr. sot); the only meaning in S. Cf. C. of E. ii. 2. 196: "Thou snail, thou slug, thou sot!" Leear, iv. 2. 8: "he called me sot," etc.

92. Utensils. For the accent, H. compares Milton, P. R. iii. 336: "And wagons fraught with utensils of war."

94. That. That which. Gr. 244. To consider = to be considered. Gr. 359, 405.

97. She. Her. See Gr. 211.

113. Troll the catch. A catch is a round, in which the parts are taken up (or caught up) in succession. Troll, as a noun, means the same as catch (see Wb.); and to troll was to sing as in a troll, or catch.

114. While-ere. A while ago. See Gr. 137.

121. The picture of Nobody. Probably an allusion to a ludicrous figure (head, arms, and legs, without a trunk, or body) printed on the old popular ballad of The Well-spoken Nobody (Halliwell).

124. Take 't us thou list. "Take what shape pleases thee."

133. Will hum, etc. See on i. 2. 198 above.

137. That when I wak'd. So that. See on i. 2. 85 above.

142. By and by. Presently; as in M. W. iv. 1. 7, M. for M. iv. 2. 73, etc. Cf. Luke, xxi. 2.

SCENE III.—1. By 'r lakin. By our Ladykin, or the Virgin Mary. The diminutive, as often, expresses endearment = our dear Lady.

2. Ache. The 1st folio has "akes." See on i. 2. 368 above.

3. Forthrights and meanders. Straight paths and winding ones. Cf. T. and C. iii. 3. 158: "Or hedge aside from the direct forthright." There is an allusion to the artificial "mazes" of the olden time.

5. Attach'd. Seized. Attach is etymologically the same as attack. Cf. Spenser, F. Q. iii. 8. 33:

"Like as a fearefull partridge, that is fledd
From the sharpe hauke which her attached neare."

14. Thoroughly. Thoroughly. See M. of V. p. 144, note on 42.

21. Drollery. Puppet-show. Cf. 2 Hen. IV. ii. 1. 156: "a pretty slight drollery."

23. One tree the phœnix' throne, etc. In Holland's translation of Pliny's Nat. Hist. (xiii. 4) we read: "I myself verily have heard straunge things of this kind of tree; and namely in regard of the bird Phœnix, which is supposed to have taken that name of this date-tree [called in Greek φοινίξ]; for it was assured unto me that the said bird died with that tree, and revived of itself as the tree sprung again." Lyly, in his Thoughts, says: "As there is but one phœnix in the world, so is there but one tree in Arabia wherein she buildeth." Florio, in his Ital. Dict., defines "Rasin" as "a tree in Arabia, whereof there is but one found, and upon it the phœnix sits." See also the opening lines of The Phœnix and the Turtle.

29. Islanders. The 1st folio has "Islands;" corrected in the 2d.
30. Certes. Certainly. The word was nearly obsolete in S.'s day. He uses it only five times. It is a favourite archaism with Spenser.
36. Muse. Wonder at. Cf. Macb. iii. 4. 85: "Do not muse at me;" K. John, iii. 1. 317: "I muse your majesty doth seem so cold," etc. We find the noun also = wonderment; as in Spenser, F. Q. i. 12. 29: "As in great muse."
39. Praise in departing. A proverbial expression. Praise given too soon may have to be retracted.
45. Dew-lapp'd like bulls. Doubtless a reference to the victims of goître, so common in mountainous districts, especially in Switzerland.
47. Whose heads stood in their breasts. Cf. Oth. i. 3. 144: "men whose heads do grow beneath their shoulders." Pliny (Nat. Hist. v. 8) tells of men that have no heads, but mouths and eyes in their breasts; and Hakluyt, in his Voyages (1598), describes "a nation of people whose heads appear not above their shoulders." Bucknill (Medical Knowledge of Shakespeare) suggests that the poet "may only refer to the effect produced by forward curvature of the spine, in which the head appears to be set below the shoulders."
48. Each putter-out of five for one. Thus in the folio. Theo. suggested "on five for one," which W. adopts. Malone (followed by D.) reads "of one for five." Collier, K., the Camb. editors, and H. retain the reading of the folio, which may be explained as "at the rate of five for one." The allusion is to "a kind of inverted life insurance" which was in vogue in S.'s day. A traveller before leaving home put out a sum of money, on condition of receiving two, three, or five times the amount upon his return. If he did not return, of course the deposit was forfeited. Cf. Ben Jonson's Every Man out of his Humour, ii. 3: "I am determined to put forth some five thousand pounds, to be paid me, five for one, upon the return of myself, my wife, and my dog, from the Turk's court in Constantinople. If all or either of us miscarry in the journey, 't is gone: if we be successful, why, there will be twenty-five thousand pounds to entertain time withal."
52. As Steevens notes, the introduction of Ariel as a harpy was doubtless taken from Virgil (Æn. iii. 209 fol.). Cf. Milton, P. R. ii. 401-403.
53. Whom Destiny . . . hath caused to belch up you. On the supplementary pronoun, see Gr. 249. Up you may be an accidental transposition, as W. regards it; but see Gr. 240.
- To instrument.* For an instrument. See on ii. 1. 72 above.
59. Such-like. See Gr. 278.
60. Their proper selves. Their own selves. Cf. Cymb. iv. 2. 97: "With my proper hand," etc.
62. Of whom. See on ii. 1. 124 above. Gr. 264.
63. Bemoock'd-at. Cf. "hoped-for" (3 Hen. VI. v. 4. 35), "sued-for" (Cor. ii. 3. 216), "unthought-on" (W. T. iv. 4. 549), "unthought-of" (1 Hen. IV. iii. 2. 141), etc. See Gr. 431.
64. Still-closing. See on i. 2. 229 above.
65. Dowle. A fibre of down. The word is probably (see Wb.) a corruption of down. In 2 Hen. IV. iv. 5. 32 the folio has "There lyes a dowlney feather," and in the next line "that light and weightlesse dowlne."

66. Like invulnerable. Similarly invulnerable. Cf. C. of E. i. 1. 83: "I had been like heedful of the other;" Hen. V. ii. 2. 183: "Shall be to you, as us, like glorious," etc.

67. Massy. Massive; as in T. and C. ii. 3. 18: "massy irons," etc. Strengths is plural because referring to more than one. Cf. wraths in 79 below.

71. Requit. Cf. "Have quit it," i. 2. 148 above, and see Gr. 342.

77. Than any death Can be at once. Than any death-at-once can be. For similar examples of transposed "adjectival phrases," see Gr. 419a.

80. Falls. On the number of the verb, see Gr. 247.

82. Clear. Pure, blameless. Cf. Macb. i. 7. 18: "clear in his great office," etc.

86. With good life And observation strange. Johnson says: "With good life may mean 'with exact presentation of their several characters,' with observation strange 'of their particular and distinct parts.' So we say, 'he acted to the life.' Or, good life may mean 'good spirit,' and observation strange 'wonderfully exact observance' [of my orders, or of the requirements of the part]. On strange, cf. strangely in iv. 1. 7 below.

92. Whom they suppose is drown'd. For the "confusion of construction" cf. K. John, iv. 2. 165: "Of Arthur, whom they say is kill'd to-night," etc. Gr. 410. See also Matt. xvi. 13.

93. Mine lov'd darling. See Gr. 238.

99. Bass. Utter in a deep tone; the only instance of the verb in S.

102. But one fiend. Let but one fiend come.

106. Gins. Not a contraction of begins. See Macb. p. 153.

108. Ecstasy. Madness. In S. ecstasy "stands for every species of alienation of mind, whether temporary or permanent, proceeding from joy, sorrow, wonder, or any other exciting cause" (Nares).

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—3. A thread of mine own life. The folio reads "a third," which, as D remarks, "is rather an old spelling than a mistake: in early books we occasionally find third for thrid, i. e. thread." V. retains "third," but K., Sr., St., W., H., and others read "thread."

4. Who. For who = whom, cf. i. 2. 80, 231 above.

13. Gift. The folio has "guest;" corrected by Rowe.

15. Virgin-knot. Alluding to the zone or girdle which was worn by maidens in classical times, and which the husband untied at the wedding. Hence solvere zonam = to marry. Cf. Per. iv. 2. 160: "Untied I still my virgin-knot will keep."

18. Aspersion. Literally, sprinkling. There is perhaps an allusion to the old ceremony of sprinkling the marriage-bed with holy water.

26. Opportune. Accented on the penult; as in W. T. iv. 4. 511: "And most opportune to our need I have." S. uses the word but twice. Gr. 490.

27. Our worser genius can. S. uses worser fifteen times. Can = "can suggest," as some explain it; or it may be=to have power, to be able. See M. of V. p. 133 (note on May you stead me?), and Gr. 307.

29. The edge of that day's celebration, etc. "The keen enjoyment of the celebration of our wedding-day" (Jephson).

31. Spoke. The -n or -en of the participle is often dropped by the Elizabethan writers. See Gr. 343.

37. The rabble. That is, "thy meaner fellows."

41. Some vanity. Some illusion. Cf. the old romance of Emare:

"The emperour sayde on hygh,
Sertes, thys ys a fayry,
Or ellys a vanyte."

42. Presently? Immediately? See M. of V. p. 131.

43. With a twink. "In the twinkling of an eye" (M. of V. ii. 2. 177). Cf. T. of S. ii. 1. 312: "in a twink."

47. Mop and mow. The two words have the same meaning (see on ii. 2. 9 above), and are often thus conjoined in writers of that day. Cf. Lear, iv. 1. 64: "mopping and mowing;" and B. and F., Pilgrim, iv. 2:

"What mops and mowes it makes! heigh, how it frisketh!
Is 't not a fairy? or some small hob-goblin?"

55. White-cold. The folio has "white cold," but it is probably a compound adjective, like "sudden-bold" (L. L. L. ii. 1. 107), "fertile-fresh" (M. W. v. 5. 72), etc. See Gr. 2.

56. My liver. The liver was anciently supposed to be the seat of love. Cf. Much Ado, iv. 1. 233: "if ever love had interest in his liver," etc.

57. A corollary. A surplus. See Wb.

58. Pertly. Briskly, promptly. Cf. the adjective in M. N. D. i. 1. 13.

63. Stover. Fodder for cattle. It has the same origin as the law-term estovers (see Wb.). In some parts of England it means hay made of clover. Thatch'd probably means "covered, strewn," and not, as it has been explained, "having shelters thatched with straw."

64. Pioned and liliated. The folio has "pioned, and twilled," which some editors have retained, explaining it as "dug and ridged." Steevens says that Spenser has pioning=digging. Rowe changed "twilled" into "tulated," and Capell into "tilled." Others have changed "pioned" to "pionied" and "peonied;" but Dr. Johnson gives "piony" as another form for "peony," and the spelling of the folio may as well stand. The peony may not suit our modern taste as a flower for "chaste crowns," but old writers are quoted who call it "the mayden piony" and "virgin peonie." It has been objected that peonies and lilies do not bloom in April, but Boswell quotes Bacon's Essay Of Gardens: "In Aprill follow, The Double white Violet; The Wall-Flower; The Stock-Gilly-Flower; The Couslip; Flower-De-lices, and Lillies of all Natures; Rose-mary Flowers; The Tulippa; The Double Piony;" etc. Cf. p. 150 below.

66. Broom groves. Groves in which broom (Spartium scoparium) abounds; though Steevens asserts that the broom itself sometimes grows "high enough to conceal the tallest cattle as they pass through it, and in places where it is cultivated still higher." Hammer changed "broom" to "brown."

68. Lass-lorn. Forsaken by his lass, or lady.

Pole-clipt. Not "clipped so as to be trained to a pole" (as Jephson explains it), but with the poles clipt, or embraced, by the vines. S. uses clip fourteen times (counting P. P. 148, 156) in this obsolete sense (also inclip once), and only three times in its ordinary sense.—Vineyard is here a trisyllable. See Gr. 487.

71. Watery arch and messenger. Iris was the goddess of the rainbow, and also the messenger of Juno.

72. Bids thee leave these, and . . . to come. See on iii. 1. 62 above.

74. Her peacocks. The chariot of Juno was drawn by peacocks, as that of Venus was by doves (see 94 below).

Amain. Literally, with main (which we still use in "might and main"), that is, with strength or force, vigorously.

78. Saffron wings. Cf. Virgil, Æn. iv. 700: "Iris croceis . . . pennis."

81. Bosky. Wooded. Cf. Milton, Com. 313: "every bosky bourn."

85. Estate. Grant, or settle as a possession. Cf. A. Y. L. v. 2. 13: "the revenue . . . will I estate upon you." See also M. N. D. i. 1. 98.

89. The means that dusky Dis, etc. The means by which Pluto carried off Proserpina. See Ovid, Met. v. 363 fol. For the epithet, cf. the "atri . . . Ditis" of Virgil (Æn. vi. 127), etc.

90. Scandal'd. Scandalous. For the verb, cf. Cor. iii. 1. 44, J. C. i. 2. 76, and Cymb. iii. 4. 62.

93. Paphos. A city in Cyprus, one of the favourite seats of Venus. Cf. V. and A. 1193 and Per. iv. prol. 32.

94. Thought they to have done. Cf. 168 below, and see Gr. 360.

96. Bed-rite. The folio reading, changed by Sr. to "bed-rite."

98. Mars's hot minion. Mars's ardent favourite. Venus was the wife of Vulcan, but loved Mars. Minion, originally equivalent to "darling" (Fr. mignon), came at length to mean "an unworthy object on whom an excessive fondness is bestowed." In Sylvester's Du Bartas (1605) we find "God's disciple and his dearest minion." So in Stirling's Domes-day: "Immortal minions in their Maker's sight."

99. Has broke. See on 31 above.

102. By her gait. Cf. Virgil, Æn. i. 46: "divum incedo regina;" and Per. v. 1. 112: "in pace another Juno."

106. Marriage-blessing. The folio has "marriage, blessing." For "noun-compounds" in S. see Gr. 430.

110. Earth's increase, foison plenty. The reading of 1st folio. The 2d folio has "and foison," which is adopted by many editors. See Gr. 484. Plenty=plentiful. The folios give the whole Song to Juno. Theo. made the correction. For foison, see on ii. 1. 160 above.

114. Spring come to you, etc. Cf. Amos, ix. 13.

121. Confines. Abodes in air, earth, water, etc. Cf. Ham. i. 1. 155:

"Whether in sea or fire, in earth or air,
The extravagant and erring spirit hies
To his confine."

123. So rare a wonder'd father and a wise. Cf. K. John, iv. 2. 27: "So new a fashion'd robe;" C. of E. iii. 2. 186: "So fair an offer'd chain," etc. See Gr. 422. Some copies of the 1st folio read "wise," and others "wife." The change must have been made while the book was printing, but which is the corrected reading cannot now be determined. All the other folios have "wise." Rowe reads "wife," and is followed by Pope, Theo., Capell, Johnson, and the Var. eds. D. gave "wise" in his 1st ed., but changes it to "wife" in the 2d; and so does H. K., on the other hand, has "wife" in the 1st ed. and "wise" in the 2d. Sr. and the Camb. editors have "wife;" St., "so rare a wonder, and a father wise;" W., "wise." Wonder'd = wonder-working. Cf. p. 151 below.

128. Winding brooks. The folio has "windring," and it is doubtful whether we should read "wand'ring" or "winding."

129. Sedg'd crowns. Cf. Milton's description of the river-god Camus (Lycidas, 104): "his bonnet sedge." Walker suggests "sedge" here.

130. Crisp channels. Rippled or ruffled by the wind. Cf. Milton, P. L. iv. 237: "the crisped brooks;" and Com. 984: "the crisped shades and bowers." Schmidt may be right in making it = "curled;" as in 1 Hen. IV. i. 3. 106. See our ed. p. 152.

138. Footling. Dancing. Cf. i. 2. 377 above.

142. Avoid! Depart, begone! Cf. A. and C. v. 2. 242: "Avoid, and leave him;" W. T. i. 2. 462: "Let us avoid," etc. Cf. 1 Sam. xviii. 11.

144. Works. Works upon, affects. Cf. v. i. 17 below.

145. Distemper'd. Disturbed, excited. Cf. Ham. iii. 2. 312: "marvellous distempered," etc. See Gr. 439.

154. Inherit. Possess. See Rich. II. p. 152. Cf. ii. 2. 162 above.

156. Leave not a rack. The folio has "racke." Rack, as applied to the clouds (Ham. ii. 2. 506, Sonn. 33. 6, etc.), is not the same word as wrack = wreck (see Wb.). The critics are not agreed which is the word here; but we have no doubt that S. wrote rack.

157. Made on. See on i. 2. 87 above.

158. Rounded. Perhaps = "finished off" (Wr.); or we may accept Schmidt's paraphrase: "the whole round or course of life has its beginning and end in a sleep, is nothing but a sleep."

167. Presented. Represented, personated. Cf. M. W. iv. 6. 20: "present the fairy queen." See also M. N. D. p. 156.

176. Unback'd colts. Cf. M. of V. v. i. 71 fol.

177. Advanc'd. See on i. 2. 407 above.

187. Stale. Decoy, bait. Cf. B. and F., Hum. Lieut. iii. 2: "Stales to catch kites;" Sidney, Arcadia: "But rather one bird caught served as a stale to bring in more;" Spenser, F. Q. ii. 1. 4: "he craftie stales did lay," etc.

193. Hang them on this line. The folio has "on them." Line is the old name for the lime or linden tree, as in v. i. 10 below; and the tree may be meant here. D. says that Stephano's joke, "Now, jerkin, you are like to lose your hair," has no point unless we assume the "line" to be a hair-line. "Buy a hair-line" is one of the cries in an old wood-cut of 1611, illustrating the trades and callings of that day; and in Lyly's Midas, a barber's apprentice facetiously says, "All my mistres' lynes that she dryes her cloathes on, are made only of Mustachio stuffe" (that is, of the cuttings of moustaches).

197. Jack. Perhaps = Jack-o'-lantern, or Will-of-the-Wisp; but cf. Much Ado, i. 1, 186: "play the flouting Jack."

201. Good my lord. My good lord. Cf. J. C. ii. 1. 255: "Dear my lord;" R. and J. iii. 5. 200: "Sweet my mother," etc. See Gr. 13.

215. I, thy Caliban. See M. of V. p. 152 (note on You and I), and Gr. 209.

219. O King Stephano! O peer! An allusion to the old song, "Take thy old cloak about thee," one stanza of which (quoted in Oth. ii. 3. 92) begins, "King Stephen was a worthy peer," etc.

222. A frippery. A shop for second-hand clothes. S. uses the word only here.

228. Let's alone. The reading of the folio. Theo. read "Let's along," which D. adopts. Malone proposed "Let it (or Let't) alone," and is followed by Coll., V., and H. W. retains the old reading, explaining it thus: "Let us do the murder alone, without the Fool's aid." In iii. 2. 50, Caliban says to Stephano:

"If thy greatness will,
Revenge it on him, for I know thou dar'st;
But this thing [Trinculo] dare not."

233. Ferkin. A kind of doublet.

234. To lose your hair. A quibbling allusion to the loss of hair from fever (or other disease) in crossing the line, or equator.

239. Pass of pate. Sally of wit. Pass (=thrust) is a term in fencing.

241. Lime. Bird-lime; as in T. G. of V. iii. 2. 68 and Macb. iv. 2. 64.

244. Barnacles. Probably not the shell-fish, but the geese into which these were supposed to be transformed. Marston (Malcontent, iii. 1) says:

"like your Scotch barnacle, now a block,
Instantly a worm, and presently a great goose."

For a full account of this old superstition, and an explanation of its origin, see Max Müller's Lect. on the Science of Language, Second Series, pp. 552-571 (Amer. ed.). Cf. p. 152 below.

245. Villanous. For the adverbial use, see Gr. i. On the reproach implied in low, cf. T. G. of V. iv. 4. 198 and A. and C. iii. 3. 35.

259. Lies at my mercy, etc. See on i. i. 15 above. D., W., and H. read "Lie," but there is no reason for changing the old construction.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—3. His carriage. His load, burden. Cf. M. W. ii. 2. 179: "take all, or half, for easing me of the carriage." See also Judges, xviii. 21, 1 Sam. xvii. 22, Isa. x. 28, Acts, xxi. 15, etc.

10. Line-grove. Changed by most editors to "lime-grove;" but see on iv. i. 193 above.

Weather-fends. Defends from the weather. See Gr. 432.

11. Till your release. Till you release them. Your is a "subjective genitive."

15. Him that you term'd. On him = he, see Gr. 208.

His tears run. The 1st folio has "runs;" corrected in the 2d.

23. That relish all as sharply Passion. That "feel everything with the same quick sensibility," or that are fully as sensitive to suffering. Schmidt and Wr. make passion a verb; as in V. and A. 1059, L. L. L. i. i. 264, etc.

33. Ye elves, etc. Some expressions in this speech may have been suggested by Medea's speech in Ovid's Metamorphoses (book vii.), which S. had probably read in Golding's translation:

"Ye ayres and windes, ye elves of hills, of brookes, of woodes alone,
Of standing lakes, and of the night, approche ye everych one,
Through help of whom (the crooked bankes much wondering at the thing)
I have compelled streames to run clean backward to their spring.
By charmes I make the calm seas rough, and make the rough seas playne,
And cover all the skie with clouds, and chase them thence again;
By charmes I raise and lay the windes, and burst the viper's jaw,
And from the bowels of the earth both stones and trees do draw;
Whole woodes and forrests I remoue, I make the mountains shake,
And even the earth itself to groan and fearfully to quake.
I call up dead men from their graves, and thee, O lightsome moone,
I darken oft, though beaten brass abate thy peril soone:
Our sorcerie dimmes the morning faire, and darks the sun at noone.
The flaming breath of fierie bulles ye quenched for my sake,
And caused their unwieldy neckes the bended yoke to take.
Among the earth-bred brothers you a mortal warre did set,
And brought asleep the dragon fell, whose eyes were never shet."

37. Green sour ringlets. "Fairy rings," or circles on the grass supposed to be made by the elves in their nightly dances. Dr. Grey (Notes on S.) says they "are higher, sower, and of a deeper green than the grass which grows round them." They were long a mystery even to scientific men. Priestley (1767) ascribed them to the effects of lightning; Pennant (1776) and others, to the burrowing of moles, by which the soil was loosened and thus made more productive; Wollaston (1807), to the spreading of a kind of agaricum, or fungus, which enriches the ground by its decay. This last explanation is now known to be a correct one.

39. Mushrooms. The folio has the old form, "mushrumps."

41. Weak masters. This is commonly explained, "weak if left to yourselves," though powerful auxiliaries (as we say that "fire is a good servant, but a bad master"); but Jephson thinks that "masters is only used ironically, as a term of slight contempt." Of the two interpretations we prefer the latter; but the "irony" is affectionate rather than contemptuous.

43. Azur'd. See Gr. 294. Walker conjectures "azure."

53. Their senses that. The senses of those whom. See Gr. 218.

58. A solemn air, etc. May this solemn air, which is the best comforter, etc.

60. Boil'd. Cf. M. N. D. v. i. 4: "seething brains;" and W. T. iii. 3.

64: "these boiled brains of nineteen and two-and-twenty."

63. Sociable to the show, etc. Sympathizing with what appears in thine.

64. Full. See on ii. i. 291 above. Gr. 291. On fellowly, see Gr. 447.

67. The ignorant fumes, etc. "The fumes of ignorance that have spread like a scum over and obscured their clearer reason" (Wr.). Cf. iv. i. 182 above.

70. I will pay thy graces Home. I will repay thy favors to the utmost, or thoroughly. Cf. i. Hen. IV. i. 3. 288: "pay us home;" Cymb. iii. 5. 92: "satisfy me home," etc. We still say "charge home" (Cor. i. 4. 38) and "strike home" (Id. iv. i. 8).

75. You, brother mine. On you followed by thee, see Gr. 232.

76. Remorse and nature. Pity and natural affection. See M. of V. p. 156, and cf. C. of E. i. i. 35: "was wrought by nature, not by vile offence."

81. Reasonable shore. Shore of reason. Cf. ignorant fumes above.

85. Discease me. Undress myself. Cf. W. T. iv. 4. 648: "therefore discease thee." For the reflexive use of the personal pronoun, see Gr. 223.

86. Sometime. Formerly. See M. of V. p. 130.

91. I do fly After summer. Cf. M. N. D. iv. i. 101: "Trip we after the night's shade;" and Milton, Hymn on Nativ. 236: "Fly after the night-steeds," etc. Theo. changed summer to "sunset," and other critics have made sad work of the Song by attempts to improve the pointing of the folio, which is essentially as I have given it, following V., W., and D. The meaning is well brought out by V.: "At night, 'when owls do cry,' Ariel couches 'in a cowsip's bell;' and he uses 'the bat's back' as his pleasant vehicle to pursue summer in its progress round the world, and thus live merrily under continual blossoms." It has been objected that bats do not "fly after summer," but become torpid in winter; but, even if the poet had known this zoological fact, he might none the less have made Ariel use the creature for his purposes. The "tricksy spirit" was not limited by natural laws.

100. Being awake. For the construction, see Gr. 376.

103. Or ere. See on i. 2. 11 above.

105. Inhabits. See Gr. 333, 336.

112. Trifle to abuse me. Phantom to deceive me. Cf. Ham. ii. 2. 632: "Abuses me to damn me." We have the same expression in B. and F. (Bonduca, v. 2): "In love too with a trifle to abuse me."

113. I not know. See on ii. 1. 118, and cf. 38 above.

114. Since I saw thee. We should now say "have seen thee." See Gr. 347.

117. An if this be at all. If indeed there be any reality in it. The folio has "And if." See Gr. 103, 105.

119. My wrongs. The wrongs I have done. Cf. 25 (and 11) above.

123. Taste Some subtleties of the isle. "This is a phrase adopted from ancient cookery and confectionery. When a dish was so contrived as to appear unlike what it really was, they called it a subtily. Dragons, castles, trees, etc., made out of sugar, had the like denomination" (Steevens).

127. Pluck. Bring down. Cf. A. W. iii. 2. 32: "pluck his indignation on thy head." Pluck is a favourite word with S. Cf. Cor. p. 204.

128. Justify you traitors. Prove you traitors. Cf. A. W. iv. 3. 64: "Second Lord. How is this justified? First Lord. The stronger part of it by her own letters."

139. I am woe for 't. I am sorry for it. Cf. A. and C. iv. 14. 133: "Woe, woe are we, sir." See Gr. 230.

142. Of whose soft grace. By whose kind favour.

145. As late. As it is recent; but some explain it, "and as recent."

Supportable. Accent on the first syllable. Cf. "détestable" (K. John, iii. 4. 29; T. of A. iv. 1. 33) and "délectable" (Rich. II. ii. 3. 7). Gr. 492. Abbott himself is inclined to put it under 497. Steevens reads "portable," a word used by S. in this sense in Lear, iii. 6. 115 and Macb. iv. 3. 89.

149. Were living. "The subjunctive used optatively" (Gr. 364).

151. Myself were muddled, etc. For "myself" as subject, see M. of V. p. 137 (note on Yoursself). Cf. iii. 3. 101 fol. above.

154. Admire. Wonder. Cf. T. N. iii. 4. 165: "wonder not, nor admire in thy mind," etc.

160. Which was thrust forth of Milan. See Gr. 266 and 166.

170. To content ye. On ye, see Gr. 236. Content (cf. the French contenter) often = "please" or "delight" in S. Cf. Ham. iii. 1. 24: "it doth much content me To hear him;" and see our ed. p. 216.

171. Here Prospero discovers Ferdinand and Miranda, playing at Chesse. Such is the stage-direction in the folio. It is the only allusion to chess in S., unless there be a punning one in T. of S. i. 1. 58, where Katherine says, "I pray you, sir, is it your will To make a stale of me amongst these mates?" Steevens thinks that the introduction of the game here was suggested by the romance of Huon de Bordeaux, where "King Ivoryn caused his daughter to play at the chesse with Huon," etc. But, as Prof. Allen suggests in an Excursus in the Phila. ed., even if S. did take a hint from that old romance, it was probably because he was aware that there was a special appropriateness in representing a prince of Naples as a chess-player, since Naples, in his day, "was the centre of chess-playing," and probably famed as such throughout Europe.

172. Play me false. Cheat me. Cf. Gr. 220.

175. If this prove, etc. H. says (1st ed.): "The sense of this passage is not altogether clear. The word not seems wanting after prove; unless if have by some means got substituted for but. Alonso has lost his son once, and if this which he now sees prove not a mere vision, he will have to lose him again." We can see no difficulty in the passage. If this be a mere vision, his son is not restored to him, and he must again give him up as lost. [In the "Harvard" ed. published since this was written, H. adopts this explanation.]

196. I am hers. That is, her father.

200. Inly. Inwardly; as in Hen. V. iv. chor. 24: "inly ruminate."

203. Chalk'd forth the way. We should say "chalked out the way." Cf. Hen. VIII. i. 1. 60: "Chalks successors their way."

213. No man was his own. Was master of himself, or in his senses.

214. Still embrace. Ever embrace. See on i. 2. 229 above.

216. Here is more of us. See on i. 2. 477 above.

221. Safely found our king and company. That is, found them safe. Cf. just below, "freshly beheld," etc. S. often uses adverbs as "predicate adjectives," a fact not mentioned by Abbott, though he refers to the use of adverbs for adjectives after is (Gr. 78). Cf. above (iii. 1. 32), "look wearily" for "look weary." So in M. W. ii. 1. 198: "looks so merrily;" A. Y. L. i. 2. 162: "he looks successfully," etc. But elsewhere we have "looks pale," "looks sad," "look stern," "look fair," etc. We find also the adjective for the adverb, as in Hen. VI. i. 2. 117: "Meantime look gracious on thy prostrate thrall," etc. The two constructions are often confounded by good writers even in our day.

223. Gave out split. Gave up as gone to pieces. Cf. A. W. ii. 3. 16: "gave him out incurable," etc.

224. Yare. See on i. 1. 3 above.

226. Tricksy. Steevens (followed by D.) explains the word as "clever, adroit;" Jephson as "pretty or engaging;" others as "cunning, sportive," etc. Rich. (Dict.) defines it "trickish, artful, dexterous, adroit, active, smart," and cites Warner, Albion's Eng. vi. 31:

"There was a tricksie girle, I wot,
Albeit clad in grey,
As peart as bird, as straite as boulte,
As fresh as flower in May."

230. Dead of sleep. The folio reading. Malone read "on sleep" (cf. Acts, xiii. 36), but on and of were often used interchangeably. Gr. 180, 182. Abbott himself puts this under 168 (of="as a consequence of").

232. But even now. Just now. See Gr. 38.

Several. Separate, distinct. See on iii. 1. 42 above.

234. Moe. See on ii. 1. 130 above.

238. Capering to eye her. Jumping for joy at the sight of her.

On a trice. We say "in a trice," as S. does elsewhere. In Lear, i. 1. 219 we have "in this trice of time."

240. Moping. The folio has "moaping," and some editors print "moping" (=grimacing). The Phila. ed. explains it rightly: "Depressed and moping, because suddenly interrupted in the midst of their rejoicing, separated from their companions, and 'enforced' to go, whither they knew not, by some irresistible supernatural power."

244. Conduct. Conductor. Cf. Rich. II. iv. 1. 157: "I will be his conduct;" R. and J. v. 3. 116: "Come, bitter conduct, come, unsavoury guide!" etc.

246. Infest. Vex; used by S. only here. For beating on, cf. i. 2. 176 and iv. 1. 163 above. See also 2 Hen. VI. ii. 1. 20 and Ham. iii. 1. 182.

248. Single I'll resolve you. In private I will explain to you. Prof. Allen (Phila. ed.) suggests that single is here used as in i. 2. 431 above. "In that case, the train of thought would be: There needs no such resort as you speak of to divine means (to an oracle) to rectify your knowledge; I alone—I, a mere weak man—will resolve your doubts."

249. Which to you shall seem, etc. Which explanation, etc. Gr. 271.

Of every These happen'd accidents. See Gr. 12 and 295.

257. Coragio. Courage (Italian). Cf. A. W. ii. 5. 97: "Bravely, coragio!"

261. These be. Cf. iii. 1. 1 above, and see Gr. 300.

267. Badges. The stolen apparel they had on. Johnson says: "The sense is, 'Mark what these men wear, and say if they are honest.'" "In the time of S. all the servants of the nobility wore silver badges on their liveries, on which the arms of their masters were engraved" (Nares). Hence the allusion here and in several other passages in S. Cf. R. of L. 1053:

"To clear this spot by death, at least I give A badge of fame to slander's livery."

269. One so strong That, etc. For the relative after such and so, see Gr. 279. Cf. 316 below.

271. Deul in her command, etc. "Act as her vicegerent without being authorized, or empowered so to do" (Malone). St. may be right in making without her power = "beyond her power" (cf. M. N. D. iv. 1. 150).

279. Reeling-ripe. Ripe may be one of the many "slang" terms for drunk, or reeling-ripe (ripe, or fit for reeling) may be a compound like weeping-ripe in L. L. L. v. 2. 274, and sinking-ripe in C. of E. i. 1. 78. Cf. B. and F., Woman's Prize, ii. 1:

"My son Petruchio, he's like little children
That lose their baubles, crying-ripe."

280. This grand liquor, etc. An allusion to the "grand elixir," or aurum potable of the alchemists, which they pretended would confer immortal youth upon him who drank it. It was a joke of the time to compare sack to this elixir, and "gilded" is elsewhere found in the same sense as here. In Fletcher's Chances (iv. 3), in reply to the question, "Is she not drunk too?" we find, "A little gilded o'er, sir; old sack, old sack, boys!"

283. I fear me. See Gr. 296, and cf. "retire me" in 311 below.

289. Sore. For the play on the word, Steevens compares 2 Hen. VI. iv. 7. 9.

290. This is a strange thing, etc. Steevens read "as strange a thing," but other examples of the ellipsis are to be found in S. See Gr. 276.

296. Seek for grace. Seek for pardon.

The nuptial. S. always uses nuptial, except in Oth. ii. 2. 8 (quarto text only) and Per. v. 3. 80. On the other hand, he has funerals (cf. the Latin funera, and the French funérailles) in J. C. v. 3. 105 and T. A. i. 1. 381, though elsewhere his word is funeral.

310. Our dear below'd solemnized. This is the metre of the folio (as Boswell remarks), and is followed by D. and W. Collier, K., and 11. print it "dear-beloved solemniz'd." But we have "solémnized" in L. L. ii. 1. 42: "Of Ja-ques Falconbridge so-lem-nized." Cf. the one instance of the word in Milton (P. L. vii. 448): "Ev'ning and morn solémniz'd the fifth day." In M. of V. ii. 9. 6, K. John, ii. 1. 539, and 1 Hen. VI. v. 3. 168, the only other instances in which S. uses the word in verse, it is "solémniz'd." Abbott shows (Gr. 491) that this peculiarity of accent is found in other words ending in -ized, as advertized, canónized, authorized, etc.

314. I'll deliver all. I'll relate all. Cf. ii. 1. 45 above.

319. Please you. If it please you. See Gr. 361, and M. of V. pp. 134, 136.

EPILOGUE.

It is well known that the Prologues and Epilogues of the English Drama are generally written by other persons than the authors of the plays, and White with good reason thinks that this Epilogue, though printed in the folio, bears internal evidence of being no exception to the rule. The thoughts are "poor and commonplace," and the rhythm is "miserable and eminently un-Shakespearian." It is apparently from the same pen as the Epilogue to Henry VIII.—"possibly Ben Jonson's, whose verses they much resemble." The Epilogue to 2 Hen. IV. is another that is evidently not Shakespeare's; and it is a significant fact that, in the folio, these three Epilogues "are plainly pointed out as separate performances." "For in these plays the characters are all sent off the stage by the direction Exeunt, and the Epilogue is set forth as something apart from the play, being, in one case, separated from it by a single rule, in another by double rules, and in the third being printed on a page by itself, while in the other plays the Exeunt or Exit is not directed until after the Epilogue, which is included within the single border-rule of the page, no separation of any kind being made." A comparison of the various Epilogues shows that "this arrangement has no reference to the personage by whom the Epilogue is to be spoken;" and, as no other explanation of it can be given, it is probable that the editors of the folio meant thus to indicate that the Epilogues are not Shakespeare's.

10. With the help of your good hands. "By your applause, by clapping hands" (Johnson). Noise was supposed to dissolve a spell. Cf. iv. 1. 126 above: "hush, and be mute, Or else our spell is marr'd."

16. Unless I be reliev'd by prayer. "This alludes to the old stories told of the despair of necromancers in their last moments, and of the efficacy of the prayers of their friends for them" (Warb.). Jephson thinks it may be an allusion to "the custom, prevalent in S.'s time, of concluding the play by a prayer, offered up kneeling, for the sovereign."

18. Mercy itself. The divine Mercy.

Frees all faults. Frees from all faults. See Gr. 200.

ADDENDA.

THE "TIME-ANALYSIS" OF THE PLAY.—As Verplanck remarks (p. 28 above), the "unities of time and place" are strictly observed in this play. The period of time represented is little more than is required for the performance on the stage, being about four hours. In i. 2. 240 (very soon after the shipwreck) Ariel says that the time of day is "two glasses" past noon, or 2 P.M. At the beginning of the last scene, in reply to Prospero's question, "How 's the day?" Ariel replies "On the sixth hour." In the same scene Alonso speaks of having been wrecked "three hours since," and says that his son's "eld'st acquaintance" with Miranda "cannot be three hours." The Boatswain also refers to the wreck as having occurred "but three glasses since."

THE SEAMANSHIP OF THE PLAY.—The following notes on this subject were furnished to Malone by the second Lord Mulgrave, a distinguished naval officer:

"The first scene of The Tempest is a very striking instance of the great accuracy of Shakspeare's knowledge in a professional science, the most difficult to attain without the help of experience. He must have acquired it by conversation with some of the most skilful seamen of that time. . . .

The succession of events is strictly observed in the natural progress of the distress described; the expedients adopted are the most proper that could have been devised for a chance of safety: and it is neither to the want of skill of the seamen or the bad qualities of the ship, but solely to the power of Prospero, that the shipwreck is to be attributed.

The words of command are not only strictly proper, but are only such as point the object to be attained, and no superfluous ones of detail. Shakspeare's ship was too well manned to make it necessary to tell the seamen how they were to do it, as well as what they were to do.

He has shown a knowledge of the new improvements, as well as the doubtful points of seamanship; one of the latter he has introduced, under the only circumstances in which it was indisputable.

The events certainly follow too near one another for the strict time of representation; but perhaps, if the whole length of the play was divided by the time allowed by the critics, the portion allotted to this scene might not be too little for the whole. But he has taken care to mark intervals between the different operations by exits.

1st Position.

Fall to't yarely, or we run ourselves aground.

1st Position.

Land discovered under the lee; the wind blowing too fresh to hawl upon a wind with the topsail set. Yare is an old sea term for briskly, in use at that time. This first command is therefore a notice to be ready to execute any orders quickly.

2d Position.

Yare, yare, take in the topsail, blow till thou burst thy wind, if room enough.

2d Position.

The topsail is taken in. 'Blow till thou burst thy wind, if room enough.' The danger in a good sea boat is only from being too near the land: this is introduced here to account for the next order.

3d Position.

Down with the topmast.—Yare, lower, lower, bring her to try with the main course.

3d Position.

The gale increasing, the topmast is struck, to take the weight from aloft, make the ship drift less to leeward, and bear the mainsail under which the ship is laid to.

4th Position.

Lay her a-hold, a-hold; set her two courses, off to sea again, lay her off.

4th Position.

The ship, having driven near the shore, the mainsail is hawled up; the ship wore, and the two courses set on the other tack, to endeavour to clear the land that way.

5th Position.

We split, we split.

5th Position.

The ship not able to weather a point, is driven on shore."

Wr. adds the following observations to the same effect by Captain E. K. Calver, R.N., F.R.S.:

"The craft is in a storm, and the Boatswain's anxiety is evidently not about the strength of the wind, but the room at disposal; 'Blow, till thou burst thy wind, if room enough.' The special danger was that of being cast upon, or pressed upon, a lee shore, and like a good sailor the Boatswain did that which any good sailor would do in the present day, he struck those masts which would be a hindrance to his getting off a lee shore (from their producing resistance and not propulsion), and set that canvas which would help to safety. 'Down with the topmast!' that is, strike, or lower, the topmast down to the cap, as it holds wind and retards the ship; and evidently the main topmast, as only one is mentioned. It is to be noted that the illustrations of ships of the period generally represent them without a fore topmast. 'Yare, yare!' carefully and quickly: 'lower, lower!' the topmast. Rigger as vessels now are, with long topmasts, and short slings and trusses, a course, or square mainsail or foresail, could not be set with the topmast struck or lowered; but with the carracks, or rudimentary ships of Elizabeth's age (and it is probable Shakespeare's ship was one of them), with their short, or pole-like topmasts, and lower yards slung a third of the mast down, such an operation would be comparatively easy. 'Bring her to try with main-course.' The main-course and mainsail are one and the same, and the reason the Boatswain wanted this set was because it is a sail of great size in the body of the ship, and propelled by it the ship quickens her rate, keeps closer to (or in the direction of) the wind, and makes less lee-way (or drift). 'Bring her to try with main-course;' that is, see if she will bear the main-course and whether it will be sufficient; but in a little time, as the occasion seemed to be more urgent and the effect of the single sail unsatisfactory, the Boatswain cries 'Lay her a-hold, a-hold! set her two courses; off to sea again! lay her off!' To understand this order, it is necessary to keep in mind the Boatswain's view of the circumstances in which he was placed. He did not care, he said, about the force of the wind, but he was afraid they had not sea-room. 'Blow, till thou burst thy wind, if room enough!' makes this clear, and that there was sufficient cause for alarm upon this point is also apparent from a passage in the second scene, where Prospero, questioning Ariel with reference to the ship and her perils, asks 'But was not this nigh shore?' and he replies, 'Close by, my master.' In short, the Boatswain, in the first instance, did what appeared to him to be needed; but now, after a short interval, whether owing to the sluggishness of the ship, or to the lee-shore being closer than he had imagined, he, unceasingly alive to the danger, and oblivious of the taunts of the passengers, gave the above order: 'Lay her a-hold, a-hold!' keep her to the wind, or as close to the wind as possible. 'Set her two courses:' foresail as well as mainsail, or twice the amount of canvas already spread; and 'off to sea again; lay her off:' an indication of the object of the order, or of the necessity for gaining sea-room so as to avoid shipwreck."

Now I arise (p. 116). All the attempts to find anything more than the literal meaning in these words are far-fetched and unsatisfactory; and we are inclined to take them literally. Prospero is about to bring his narrative to an end, and rises—probably to put on his mantle again, as D. assumes. Miranda is going to rise also, but her father bids her "sit still" and hear the little that remains to be told of their "sea-sorrow." She wants to know further what were his reasons for raising the storm—but he answers her briefly, bids her "cease more questions," puts her to sleep, and hastens to call Ariel, whose report of the tempest he is impatient to hear.

Influence (i. 2. 182). An astrological word, and rarely used by S. except in that specific sense. See Lear, p. 182, or W. T. p. 162.

Still-vex'd Bermoothes (p. 117). Wr. quotes Webster, Duchess of Malfi, iii. 2:

"I would sooner swim to the Bermootha's on Two politicians' rotten bladders."

In the year 1609 a fleet sent out by the Virginia Company, Sir George Summers being admiral, was encountered by storms and the admiral ship was driven to the Bermudas. "Sir George Sommers, sitting at the stearne, seeing the ship desperate of reliefe, looking euery minute when the ship would sinke, hee espied land, which, according to his, and Captaine Newport's opinion, they iudged it should be that dreadfull coast of the Bermodes, which Iland[s] were of all Nations, said and supposed to bee enchanted and inhabited with witches, and deuills, which grew by reason of accustomed monstrous Thunder, storme, and tempest, neere vnto those Ilands, also for that the whole coast is so wonderous dangerous, of Rockes, that few can approach them, but with vnspeakeable hazard of ship-wrack" (Stow's Annals). Another form of the word is found in Webster, The Devil's Law-case, iii. 2 :

"Why, 't is an engine
That 's only fit to put in execution
Barmotho pigs."

See also Fletcher's Women Pleased, i. 2 :

"The devil should think of purchasing that egg-shell,
To victual out a witch for the Burmootheres."

Past the mid season (i. 2. 239). This speech and the next have been variously re-distributed by the editors, on the ground that "Prospero asks a question and yet answers it himself." Warb. adopted the conjecture of Theo. that we should read :

"Prospero. What is the time o' th' day?
Ariel. Past the mid season at least two glasses.
Prospero. The time," etc.

Johnson, though thinking that "this passage needs not be disturbed, it being common to ask a question which the next moment enables us to answer," suggested—

"Prospero. What is the time o' th' day? Past the mid season?
Ariel. At least two glasses.
Prospero. The time," etc.

Staunton, to obviate the supposed inconsistency and render any change in the distribution of the speeches unnecessary, pointed Prospero's speech thus—

"At least two glasses—the time 'twixt six and now—
Must by us both be spent most preciously."

But, as Wr. observes, this would make the time 4 P.M., which hardly answers to Ariel's "Past the mid season;" and it would reduce the time of the play to little more than two hours, when it is clearly not less than three, and probably four (see p. 145 above). On the whole, though Theo. and Warb. may be right, there does not seem to be sufficient reason for disturbing the old text. Prospero asks the time of day, and when Ariel says it is past noon, he reflects a moment and decides that it must be at least two hours later than that. He ought to know the time better than Ariel, but forgets this in his present excited state of mind. Ariel's loose reply sets him thinking, and he fixes the hour—perhaps by a glance at the sun—more precisely than his airy servitor.

Water with berries in 't (i. 2. 333). Wr. remarks: "It would almost seem as if this were intended as a description of the yet little-known coffee. 'The Turkes,' says Burton (Anatomy of Melancholy, part ii. sect. 5. mem. 1. subs. 5), 'haue a drinke called coffa (for they use no wine), so named of a berry as blacke as soot, and as bitter, (like that blacke drinke which was in vse amongst the Lacedemonians, and perhaps the same) which they sip still of, and sup as warme as they can suffer.' This passage occurs for the first time in the fourth edition of Burton which was printed in 1632, and it shews that the virtues of this drink were as yet only known in England by report."

His brave son (p. 121). Some believe that this son may have been taken from the story on which the play was possibly founded. St. conjectures that he was one of the characters as the play was first written, but was omitted when it was printed. He thinks that each player had a property in his own part, and that sometimes all the parts could not be bought up by the publishers. Fleay suggests that "perhaps Francisco is what is left of him." It had occurred to us, long before Fleay's Manual was published, that Francisco might be Antonio's son; and an examination of the two speeches assigned to him confirms the conjecture. In the first (ii. 1. 110 fol.) there is something of youthful sympathy with the muscular energy of youth, and of youthful hopefulness as well. The other speech (iii. 3. 40) is the single sentence, "They vanish'd strangely," when the spirits that have spread the banquet disappear; and this seems like the expression of youthful wonder.

A laughter (ii. 1. 33). Dr. Ingleby (Shakespeare Hermeneutics, p. 157) remarks that we want a "basis" for the pun here. "Laughter," he adds, "may be the cant name of some small coin (a doit or a denier) commonly laid in betting. At present the only meaning of the word (laughter, laster, lawter) is a setting of eggs laid at one time. The word is in Brockett [Glossary of North-Country Words], and is still in provincial use: a gamekeeper at Yoxford, Suffolk, told us that he found he had better ruck with the second lawter (of pheasant's eggs) than with the first." Halliwell (Archaic Dict.) gives laster as a Northern word for "the number of eggs laid by a hen before she sits."

An eye of green (p. 123). Wr. quotes Cotgrave, Fr. Dict.: "Couleur de Minime. A huswiues darke gray, or light soote colour, wherein there is an eye of gray;" and Sandys, Travels: "cloth of silver tissue with an eye of greene."

Bat-fowling (p. 125). Markham goes on to describe the process, as follows: "For the manner of Bat-fowling, it may be vsed either with Nettes, or without Nettes: If you vse it without Nettes (which indeede is the most common of the two) you shall then proceede in this manner. First, there shall be one to cary the Cresset of fire (as was shewed for the Lowbell) then a certaine number as two, three, or foure (according to the greatnesse of your company) and these shall haue poales bound with dry round wispes of hay, straw, or such like stuffe, or else bound with pieces of Linkes, or Hurdes, dipt in Pitch, Rosen, Grease, or any such like matter that will blaze.

"Then another company shal be armed with long poales, very rough and bushy at the vpper endes, of which the Willow, Byrche, or long Hazell are best, but indeed according as the country will afford so you must be content to take.

"Thus being prepared and comming into the Bushy or rough ground where the haunts of Birds are, you shall then first kindle some of your fiers as halfe, or a third part, according as your prouision is, and then with your other bushy and rough poales you shall beat the Bushes, Trees, and haunts of the Birds, to enforce them to rise, which done you shall see the Birds which are rayseed, to flye and play about the lights and flames of the fier, for it is their nature through their amazednesse, and affright at the strangenes of the light and the extreame darknesse round about it, not to depart from it, but as it were almost to scorch their wings in the same; so that those who have the rough bushye poales, may (at their pleasures) beat them down with the same, & so take them."

Marmoset (ii. 2. 157). "The animal known at present by this name is a native of South America, but the word is found in the language long before the discovery of America. In Maundevile's Travels (ed. Halliwell, 1866), p. 210, we read, 'In that Hille and in that Gardyn, ben many dyverse Bestes, as of Apes, Marmozettes, Babewynes, and many other dyverse Bestes.' The following definition occurs in an early Latin and English Dictionary, Bibliotheca Eliotæ (1548): 'Cercopithecus, an ape with a taile, called a marmoset.' In the first folio it is spelt 'Marmazet' (Wr.). S. uses the word only here.

Make a stock-fish of thee (p. 132). Wr. quotes Hollyband, Fr. Dict. 1593: "Ie te frotteray à double carillon, I will beate thee like a stockefish." Cotgrave (Fr. Dict., s. v. Carillon) has, "Ie te frotteray à double carillon. I will beat thee like a stockfish, I will swinge thee while I may stand ouer thee." See also B. J., Every Man in his Humour, iii. 2: "Slight, peace! thou wilt be beaten like a stockfish else."

Unicorns (iii. 3. 22). "In Topsell's Hist. of Four-footed Beasts, 1658, a chapter 'Of the Vnicorn' is devoted to an attempt to convince 'the vulgar sort of Infidel people which scarcely believe any herb but such as they see in their own Gardens, or any beast but such as is in their own flocks,' that there is such a creature as the unicorn, whose horn has virtue against poison" (Wr.).

Our worsor genius can (p. 134). "In mediæval theology, the rational soul is an angel, the lowest in the hierarchy for being clothed for a time in the perishing vesture of the body. But it is not necessarily an angel of light. It may be a good or evil genius, a guardian angel or a fallen spirit, a demon of light or darkness" (Edinburgh Review, July 1869, p. 98).

Pioned and lilied (p. 135). The peony does not seem an appropriate flower for a "chaste crown;" but a writer in the Edinburgh Review (Oct. 1872, p. 363) says that peony is the provincial name in Warwickshire for the "marsh marigold," which "haunts the watery margins as the constant associate of reeds and rushes, blooms in 'spongy April,' and in common with other water flowers is twined with sedge 'to make cold nymphs chaste crowns.'" The local pronunciation, he says, is piomy. Again, as Halliwell (Archaic Dict.) gives twills as=reeds, this writer maintains that "twilled is the very word to describe the crowded sedges in the shallower reaches of the Avon as it winds round Stratford." But, as Wr. remarks, Halliwell simply follows Ray in giving twills as="quills, reeds," for winding yarn; but there is no authority for going further and saying that it means "reed, the name of a plant."

Clarke remarks: "peoned and lilied presents a poetical picture of brilliant colouring that we have often heard both Keats and Leigh Hunt admire." Some have said that the mention of chaste crowns seems to demand the previous mention of flowers, and therefore favours pioned and liliated; but others argue that the reference to April as trimming the banks implies that flowers have not been mentioned and confirms the interpretation of pioned and twilled as = dug and ridged. One argument is just as good as the other, neither being conclusive. The mention of the pioned and liliated brims may well enough suggest the reference to the origin of the flowers and the use that is made of them. Some have denied that lilies grow on the banks of rivers; but Mr. Eliacombe, in his Plant-Lore of Shakespeare, adopts the reading liliated.

Broom groves (p. 135). We see that Schmidt explains this as "perhaps woods overgrown with genista, pathless woods." St. thinks that yellow, the colour of the broom, is "especially congenial to the dismissed and lass-lorn bachelor."

So rare a wonder'd father and a wise (p. 136). Mr. Ashhurst (Phila. ed.) says: "Miranda must be the chief cause of Ferdinand's finding the Island a Paradise. So rare a wonder'd father, meaning father of so rare a wonder, though inverted and obscure, is hardly beyond the limits of poetic license. Having spoken of Prospero in what is to Ferdinand his most interesting position, as father of admired Miranda, and himself her betrothed, he then passes to his individual characteristic, wisdom. This reading has at least the merit of adherence to the canon, keeping the text unchanged while it does not make Ferdinand guilty of omitting among his inducements to live forever on the Isle the Goddess on whom these airs attend."

W. remarks: "Both readings of course yield an excellent sense, but it must be admitted that the latter [wise] seems to bring Ferdinand from his rapture back to earth again. He is lost in wonder at Prospero's magic power. It may be objected that in this case Miranda is left out altogether, but the use of the word father shows that Ferdinand regarded her as one with himself."

Answer your summons (iv. i. 131). H. changes your to "our;" but your summons is the summons received by you. Cf. your compensation in 2 above, which H. explains correctly as "the compensation you receive."

We are such stuff, etc. (iv. i. 156 fol.). Dr. Ingleby (Shakespeare Hermeneutics, p. 139) says: "Hardly in all Shakespeare can two or three successive lines be found more touchingly beautiful than these . . . To seize the central or leading notion here is not difficult. Jean Paul—a man worthy to be Shakespeare's unconscious interpreter—was certainly not thinking of this fine passage when he wrote the following in Flower, Fruit, and Thorn-pieces, chap. xv., which I quote from Mr. E. H. Noel's admirable version: 'And he thought of the clouds, the cold and the night, that reigned around the poles of life—the birth and death of man—as round the poles of the earth.' What does this mean, but that our life is rounded by the sleep of birth and death, as if they were its poles? And ours is but a little life: but little is included between those poles, so little, that we thank God that the later pole is but a sleep. The accomplished author of Lorna Doone thus freely (and legitimately) employs Shakespeare's image—only there is one word which one might wish expunged, namely off before of: 'In the farthest and darkest nook, overgrown with grass, and overhung by a weeping tree, a little bank of earth betokened the rounding off of a hapless life."

Under the line (iv. i. 233). Dr. Nicholson (Notes and Queries, 3d Series, ii. 49) explains this as "meaning it was put as were the stakes at tennis, and so could be taken by the winner." He quotes Florio, Second Frutes:

"T. Let vs keepe the lawes of the court.

G. That is, stake money vnder the line, is it not so?

T. Yea sir, you hitt it right.

H. Here is my monie, now stake you."

But, as Wr. suggests, the phrase may have another meaning derived from the same game. In Heywood's Proverbs and Epigrams, we find "Thou hast striken the ball vnder the lyne" explained as "Thou hast lost."

Barnacles (p. 139). "In Gerarde's Herbal, 1597 (p. 1391) is a chapter 'Of the Goose tree, Barnakle tree, or the tree bearing Geese,' in which it is said, 'There are founde in the north parts of Scotland, & the Ilands adiacent, called Orchades, certaine trees, whereon doe growe certaine shell fishes, of a white colour tending to russet; wherein are contained little liuing creatures: which shels in time of maturitie doe open, and out of them grow those little liuing things; which falling into the water, doe become foules, whom we call Barnakles, in the north of England Brant Geese, and in Lancashire tree Geese.' Gerarde then goes on to tell what he had himself seen in 'a small Ilande in Lancashire called the Pile of Fouldres,' where branches of trees were cast ashore, 'wheron is found a certaine spume or froth, that in time breedeth vnto certaine shels, in shape like those of the muskle, but sharper pointed, and of a whitish colour.' In process of time the thing contained in these shells 'falleth into the sea, where it gathereth feathers, and groweth to a foule, bigger then a Mallard, and lesser then a Goose; hauing blacke legs and bill or beake, and feathers blacke and white, spotted in such maner as is our Magge-Pie, called in some places a Pie-Annet, which the people of Lancashire call by no other name then a tree Goose; which place aforesaide, and all those parts adioining, do so much abound therewith, that one of the best is bought for three pence: for the truth heerof, if any doubt, may it please them to repaire vnto me, and I shall satisfie them by the testimonie of good witnesses'" (Wr.).

A solemn air, and the best comforter, etc. (v. i. 58 fol.). II. reads "as the best;" but this use of and (=even) is not unprecedented. Cf. Gr. 95. He also adopts Dr. Ingleby's conjecture of "the brains" and "the skull;" but the words may be supposed to be addressed to Alonso, who, according to the stage-direction (taken from the folio), is the frantic leader of the party.

The folio has "boile" for boil'd, which is Pope's reading and generally adopted. Dr. Ingleby would retain the old text, assuming an ellipsis of which before boil (Gr. 244).

Wrangle (v. i. 174). Quarrel, contend angrily or unfairly. The unfairly is suggested, not directly expressed. Mr. Ashhurst (Phila. ed.) explains it as "win unjustly (used in its old sense as admirative of wrong)."

INDEX OF WORDS AND PHRASES EXPLAINED.

- abuse (=deceive), 140.
 aches (pronunciation), 119, 132.
 admire (=wonder), 141.
 advance (=raise), 121, 137.
 adventure (=venture), 125.
 afeard, 129.
 afore, 128.
 after, 128.
 again, 120.
 amain, 136.
 an (=if), 125, 129, 141.
 and (=even), 152.
 answer your summons, 151.
 apace, 140.
 Argier, 118.
 as (=as if), 124.
 as (omitted), 114, 125, 143.
 as (redundant), 113.
 aspersion, 134.
 attach (=attack), 132.
 avoid (begone), 137.
 azure, 140.
 badge, 143.
 barnacle, 138, 152.
 bass (verb), 134.
 bate, 118.
 bat-fowling, 125, 149.
 be (=are), 127.
 bear up, 131.
 bemocked; at, 133.
 Bermoothes, 117, 147.
 berries (=coffee?), 148.
 best (thou'rt), 119.
 betid, 112.
 beyond man's life, 126.
 blue-eyed, 118.
 boiled brains, 140.
 bombard, 128.
 bosky, 136.
 brave (=fine), 121.
 bring her to try with main course, 110, 146.
 broom-groves, 135, 151.
 busiless, 130.
 but even now, 142.
 but (=except that), 121.
 but (=otherwise than), 115.
 Caliban, 118.
 call, 134.
 candied, 127.
 capering to eye her, 142.
 cares, etc. (plural), 110.
 carriage (=load), 139.
 catch (=song), 132.
 certes, 133.
 chalked forth, 142.
 changed eyes, 121.
 cheer, 109.
 cheerly, 109.
 cherubin, 115.
 chough, 127.
 clear (=pure), 134.
 clip, 136.
 closeness, 114.
 cockerel, 123.
 coil, 117.
 come by, 127.
 companion (contemptuous), 131.
 conduct (=guide), 142.
 confederates (verb), 114.
 confines, 136.
 content (noun), 127.
 content (=please), 141.
 control (=confute), 121.
 cooling of the air, 117.
 coragio, 143.
 corners of the earth, 122.
 corollary, 135.
 correspondent to command, 118.
 courses (=sails), 111, 146.
 courtesy, 120.
 crabs (=apples), 129.
 crisp, 137.
 curtsy, 120.
 dead of sleep, 142.
 dear, 124.
 deboshed, 131.
 deck, 115.
 deliver (=relate), 144.
 dewlapped like bulls, 133.
 Dido, Widow, 124.
 Dis, 136.
 discase, 140.
 discharge, 126.
 distempered, 137.
 distinctly, 117.
 do (omitted), 124.
 doit, 128.
 dolour, 123.
 doubts discovery there, 126.
 dowe, 133.
 drawn, 127.
 drollery, 132.
 drowning mark, 110.
 dry, 115.
 ecstasy, 134.
 estate (verb), 136.
 ever, 116.
 eye (=tinge), 123, 149.
 fadom, 121.
 fall, (transitive), 127, 140.
 fear (reflexive), 143.
 fearful, 122.
 feat, 120, 127.
 featly, 120.
 fellow, 131.
 fever of the mad, 117.
 fine, 119.
 fire (dissyllable), 111.
 flatling, 125.
 flat-long, 125.
 flote, 117.
 foison, 125, 136.
 footing (=dancing), 137.
 foot it, 120.
 for (=against), 111.
 for (=as for), 117.
 for (=because), 118.
 forthright, 132.
 fraughting, 112.
 free (=to free from), 145.
 fresh (noun), 131.
 frippery, 138.
 from (=away from), 113.
 full (adverb), 112.
 funeral, 143.

gaberdine, 128.
genius, 150.
gentle, 122.
gilded (= drunk), 143.
gins (verb), 134.
give out (= give up), 142.
glasses (= hours), 117.
glut (= swallow), 111.
good (vocative), 109.
good my lord, 138.
grace (= pardon), 142.
grand liquor, 143.
green sour ringlets, 139.
grudge (= murmur), 118.

hand (verb), 110.
hearken (transitive), 115.
hest, 118, 130.
hint (= cause), 115, 123.
hollowly, 131.
holp, 113.
home (= to the full), 140.
honeycomb (plural), 119.

I (omitted), 120, 122.
if heed me, 125.
ignorant fumes, etc., 140.
impertinent, 115.
importuned (accent), 124.
in (= while), 132.
inch-meal, 128.
incip, 136.
incharitable, 111.
infest (= vex), 143.
in few, 115.
influence, 147.
infused, 115.
inherit (= possess), 137.
inly, 142.
in my rate, 124.
into (= in), 118.
into (= unto), 114.
invert, 131.
is (= are), 122.
it (= its), 120, 125.
it's, 114, 120.

Jack, 137.
jerk in, 138.
justify (= prove), 141.

key (tuning-key), 114.
kibe, 127.
King Stephano, 138.

lakin, 132.
lass-lorn, 135.
laughter, 149.
lay her a-hold, 111.
learn (= teach), 119.
let's alone, 138.
lie play upon, 131.
lieu, 115.

like (= alike), 134.
like of, 131.
lime (= bird-lime), 138.
line (= lime), 137.
liver (seat of love), 135.
look wearily, 130.
lorded, 114.
lush, 123.
lusty (= vigorous), 123.

maid (= servant), 131.
make a stock-fish of thee, 150.
manage (noun), 113.
marmoset, 129, 150.
marriage-blessing, 136.
massy, 134.
meander, 132.
meddle, 112.
merchant (= merchantman), 123.
merely, 111.
methinks, 110.
might (= could), 114.
minion, 136.
Miranda, 131.
miss (= do without), 119.
moe, 124, 142.
moon-calf, 129.
moon, man i' the, 126, 129.
mop, 135.
moping, 142.
more better, 112.
more braver, 121.
most busy, least when I do it, 130.
mount (= raise), 128.
mouths, cold, 111.
mow, 128, 135.
muse (= wonder), 133.
my (subjective), 141.
myself (subject), 141.

natural (play upon), 131.
nature (= natural affection), 140.
needs, 114.
nerves (= sinews), 122.
nimble (lungs), 125.
Nobody (picture of), 132.
no man was his own, 142.
not (transposed), 124, 141.
note (= news), 126.
now I arise, 116, 147.
nuptial, 143.

observation (= observance), 134.
of (= about), 124.
of he or Adrian, 123.
of (= in), 142.
of (redundant), 117, 131.
old (intensive), 119.
omit (= neglect), 125.

on (= of), 114, 119, 121, 124, 137.
one (play upon), 123.
ooze, 118.
opportune (accent), 134.
or ere, 112.
out (= fully), 112.
overopping, 113.
owe (= own), 121, 131.

painful, 129.
Paphos, 136.
pass of pate, 138.
passion (= sorrow), 120.
passion (verb?), 139.
pay thy graces home, 140.
peacocks (Juno's), 136.
pertly, 135.
phoenix, 132.
piece (= model), 113.
pied, 131.
pioned, 135, 150.
plantation (play upon), 124.
play me false, 141.
play the men, 110.
please you, 144.
pluck, 112, 141.
point (to), 116.
pole-clipt, 136.
poor-John, 128.
praise in departing, 133.
present, of the, 110. present (= represent), 137.
presently, 135.
princess (plural), 116.
proper, 128, 133.
put it to the foil, 131.
putter-out of five for one, 133.

quality, 116.
quick freshes, 130.

rack, 137.
rate, 124.
rear my hand, 127.
reasonable shore, 140.
red plague, 119.
reeling-ripe, 143.
relieved by prayer, 144.
remember (thee), 117.
remorse (= pity), 140.
requit, 134.
resolve (= explain to), 143.
revenue (accent), 114.
rid (= destroy), 119.
room (= sea-room), 110.
rounded, 137.

sack (= wine), 129.
sad knot, in this, 117.
safely (= safe), 142.
saffron wings, 136.

sans. 114.
 scamels, 129.
 scandal (verb), 136.
 scraped, 128.
 screen (figurative), 114.
 sedged, 137.
 sensible (=sensitive), 125.
 set (eyes), 131.
 Setebos, 120.
 sets off (=offsets), 129.
 several, 131, 142.
 shaken (=shook), 127.
 should, 120, 125, 127.
 shroud (verb), 128.
 siege, 128.
 since (with past tense), 141.
 single (=weak), 121, 143.
 skillless, 131.
 so (omitted), 114, 120, 132.
 so rare a wondered father,
 etc., 136, 151.
 sociable to the show of thine, 140.
 solemnized (accent), 144.
 sometime, 140.
 sore (play upon), 143.
 sot (=fool), 132.
 south-west, 119.
 spoke (participle), 135.
 spriting, 118.
 stale, 137.
 standard, 131.
 staniel, 129.
 steaded, 115.
 still (=ever), 117, 133.
 stock-fish, 132, 150.
 stomach (=courage), 115.
 stover, 135.
 subtilty, 141.
 suggestion (=temptation), 127.

supportable (accent), 141.
 swabber, 128.

 take 't as thou list, 132.
 taste some subtilties, 141.
 teen, 113.
 tell (=count), 123.
 temperance (=temperature),
 123.
 tend (=attend), 110.
 tender (=regard), 127.
 that (omitted, etc.), 121.
 that (=that which), 132.
 thatched, 135.
 third (=thread), 134.
 thou'rt best, 119.
 throughly, 132.
 to (=for), 124, 133.
 to (omitted), 121, 131.
 to-fore, 128.
 top of admiration, 131.
 trash, 113.
 trebles thee o'er, 125.
 trenchering, 129. trice (on a), 142.
 tricky, 142.
 trifle, 140.
 troll, 132.
 twilled, 135.

 under the line, 152.
 undergoing, 115.
 unicorns, 150.
 urchin, 119.
 urchin-shows, 128.
 utensils (accent), 132.

 vanity, 135.
 vast of night, 119.
 villanous (adverb), 139.
 vineyard (trisyllable), 136.

virgin-knot, 134.
 visitation, 130.
 visitor, 123.

 waist (of ship), 117.
 ward (in fencing), 122.
 water with berries in 't, 148.
 weather-fend, 139.
 welkin's cheek, 111.
 well drawn, 129.
 wench, 115.
 wezand, 132.
 what else i' the world, 131.
 when (of impatience), 119.
 which (the), 115.
 which (=who), 119, 129.
 while-ere, 132.
 whiles, 119.
 whist, 120.
 white-cold, 135.
 who (=for they), 131.
 who (=which), 111, 124,
 133.
 who (=whom), 113.
 whom (=who), 134.
 wicked, 119.
 will (customary), 117, 132.
 wink (=shut the eyes), 125, 127.
 with a twink, 135.
 woe for 't, 141.
 works (=works upon), 137.
 worser, 134.
 worser genius, 150.
 wrack, 112.
 wrangle, 152.

 yare, 109, 142.
 yarely, 109.
 yond, 121.
 your (subjective), 139.

CALIBAN (act ii. scene 2).

SHAKESPEARE.

WITH NOTES BY WM. J. ROLFE, A.M.

The Merchant of Venice.
The Tempest.
Julius Cæsar.
Hamlet.
As You Like It.
Henry the Fifth.
Macbeth.
Henry the Eighth.
A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Richard the Second.
Richard the Third.
Much Ado About Nothing.
Antony and Cleopatra.
Romeo and Juliet.
Othello.
Twelfth Night.
The Winter's Tale.
King John.
Henry IV. Part I.
Henry IV. Part II.

King Lear.
The Taming of the Shrew.
All's Well That Ends Well.
Coriolanus.
Comedy of Errors.
Cymbeline.
Merry Wives of Windsor.
Measure for Measure.
Two Gentlemen of Verona.
Love's Labour's Lost.
Timon of Athens.
Henry VI. Part I.
Henry VI. Part II.
Henry VI. Part III.
Troilus and Cressida.
Pericles, Prince of Tyre.
The Two Noble Kinsmen.
Poems.
Sonnets.
Titus Andronicus.

ILLUSTRATED. 16MO, CLOTH, 56 CTS. PER VOL. ; PAPER, 40 CTS. PER VOL.

In the preparation of this edition of the English Classics it has been the aim to adapt them for school and home reading, in essentially the same way as Greek and Latin Classics are edited for educational purposes. The chief requisites are a pure text (expurgated, if necessary), and the notes needed for its thorough explanation and illustration.

Each of Shakespeare's plays is complete in one volume, and is preceded by an Introduction containing the "History of the Play," the "Sources of the Plot," and "Critical Comments on the Play."

From HORACE HOWARD FURNESS, Ph.D., LL.D., Editor of the "New Variorum Shakespeare."

No one can examine these volumes and fail to be impressed with the conscientious accuracy and scholarly completeness with which they are edited. The educational purposes for which the notes are written Mr. Rolfe never loses sight of, but like "a well-experienced archer hits the mark his eye doth level at."

From F. J. FURNIVALL, Director of the New Shakspeare Society, London.

The merit I see in Mr. Rolfe's school editions of Shakspeare's Plays over those most widely used in England is that Mr. Rolfe edits the plays as works of a poet, and not only as productions in Tudor English. Some editors think that all they have to do with a play is to state its source and explain its hard words and allusions, they treat it as they would a charter or a catalogue of household furniture, and then rest satisfied. But Mr. Rolfe, while clearing up all verbal difficulties as carefully as any Dryasdust, always adds the choicest extracts he can find, on the spirit and special "note" of each play, and on the leading characteristics of its chief personages. He does not leave the student without help in getting at Shakspeare's chief attributes, his characterization and poetic power. And every practical teacher knows that while every boy can look out hard words in a lexicon for himself, not one in a score can, unhelped, catch points of and realize character, and feel and express the distinctive individuality of each play as a poetic creation.

From Prof. EDWARD DOWDEN, LL.D., of the University of Dublin, Author of "Shakspeare: His Mind and Art."

I incline to think that no edition is likely to be so useful for school and home reading as yours. Your notes contain so much accurate instruction, with so little that is superfluous; you do not neglect the æsthetic study of the play; and in externals, paper, type, binding, etc., you make a book "pleasant to the eyes" (as well as "to be desired to make one wise")—no small matter, I think, with young readers and with old.

From EDWIN A. ABBOTT, M.A., Author of "Shakespearian Grammar."

I have not seen any edition that compresses so much necessary information into so small a space, nor any that so completely avoids the common faults of commentaries on Shakespeare—needless repetition, superfluous explanation, and unscholar-like ignoring of difficulties.

From HIRAM CORSON, M.A., Professor of Anglo-Saxon and English Literature, Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y.

In the way of annotated editions of separate plays of Shakespeare, for educational purposes, I know of none quite up to Rolfe's.

From Prof. F. J. CHILD, of Harvard University.

I read your "Merchant of Venice" with my class, and found it in every respect an excellent edition. I do not agree with my friend White in the opinion that Shakespeare requires but few notes—that is, if he is to be thoroughly understood. Doubtless he may be enjoyed, and many a hard place slid over. Your notes give all the help a young student requires, and yet the reader for pleasure will easily get at just what he wants. You have indeed been conscientiously concise.

Under date of July 25, 1879, Prof. CHILD adds: Mr. Rolfe's editions of plays of Shakespeare are very valuable and convenient books, whether for a college class or for private study. I have used them with my students, and I welcome every addition that is made to the series. They show care, research, and good judgment, and are fully up to the time in scholarship. I fully agree with the opinion that experienced teachers have expressed of the excellence of these books.

From Rev. A. P. PEABODY, D.D., Professor in Harvard University.

I regard your own work as of the highest merit, while you have turned the labors of others to the best possible account. I want to have the higher classes of our schools introduced to Shakespeare chief of all, and then to other standard English authors; but this cannot be done to advantage, unless under a teacher of equally rare gifts and abundant leisure, or through editions specially prepared for such use. I trust that you will have the requisite encouragement to proceed with a work so happily begun.

From the Examiner and Chronicle, N. Y.

We repeat what we have often said, that there is no edition of Shakespeare's which seems to us preferable to Mr. Rolfe's. As mere specimens of the printer's and binder's art they are unexcelled, and their other merits are equally high. Mr. Rolfe, having learned by the practical experience of the class-room what aid the average student really needs in order to read Shakespeare intelligently, has put just that amount of aid into his notes, and no more. Having said what needs to be said, he stops there. It is a rare virtue in the editor of a classic, and we are proportionately grateful for it.

From the N. Y. Times.

This work has been done so well that it could hardly have been done better. It shows throughout knowledge, taste, discriminating judgment, and, what is rarer and of yet higher value, a sympathetic appreciation of the poet's moods and purposes.

From the Pacific School Journal, San Francisco.

This edition of Shakespeare's plays bids fair to be the most valuable aid to the study of English literature yet published. For educational purposes it is beyond praise. Each of the plays is printed in large clear type and on excellent paper. Every difficulty of the text is clearly explained by copious notes. It is remarkable how many new beauties one may discern in Shakespeare with the aid of the glossaries attached to these books. . . . Teachers can do no higher, better work than to inculcate a love for the best literature, and such books as these will best aid them in cultivating a pure and refined taste.

From the Christian Union, N. Y.

Mr. W. J. Rolfe's capital edition of Shakespeare—by far the best edition for school and parlor use. We speak after some practical use of it in a village Shakespeare Club. The notes are brief but useful ; and the necessary expurgations are managed with discriminating skill.

From the Academy, London.

Mr. Rolfe's excellent series of school-editions of the Plays of Shakespeare. . . . Mr. Rolfe's editions differ from some of the English ones in looking on the plays as something more than word-puzzles. They give the student helps and hints on the characters and meanings of the plays, while the word-notes are also full and posted up to the latest date. . . . Mr. Rolfe also adds to each of his books a most useful "Index of Words and Phrases explained."

PUBLISHED BY HARPER & BROTHERS, NEW YORK.

Any of the above works will be sent by mail, postage prepaid, to any part of the United States, on receipt of the price.

